R. A. Barnet was coming out of the New York Casino on the first night of "Jack and the Beanstailt," when he heard the following dialogue between two chapples: "I suppose you have seen Madge Lessing in almost everything?" "Yes, and in almost nothing. Why?" "I want to ask you which you consider her best play?" "Her leg, dear boy," was the quick retort.

Arthur Bourchier, now appearing at the Bijou Theatre, New York, at the head of his own company from the London Royal ty Theatre, has risen in his art with remarkable rapidity. Mr. Bourchier's first professional appearance was made only seven years ago in Mrs. Langtry's company. His theatrical ambition was early developed in private performances at Eton, and later in the Oxford University Dramatic Club, founded by Canon Scott Holland, the Reverend the Hon. J. G. Adderiey, and Mr. Bourchier among others.

In the Eighth District Court, New York, last Thursday, a jury awarded $170 to Lawyer Francis C. Wellmann, who brought suit to recover from Henry C. Miner $205, the value of a carriage door smashed last week at the Fifth-avenue Theatre, through alleged interposition of an attache of the house. The plaintiff and wife, Emma Juch, testified that they had driven to the theatre, and, when about to alight from their brougham, one William Brown, a liveried negro at the door, had shouted to their driver to move further along, which, being done, resulted in the collision of the opening carriage door and a post with disastrous results for the door. The defence held that Brown was not employed by the theatre, but the fury decided in favor of the plaintiff. The defendant's counsel gave notice of an appeal.
