INSPECTIONS OF THE CANADIANS BY BONAR LAW

Inspiring Scene in Downpour of Rain—Mr. Law's Speech on Dominion's Share in Government

(London Times)

Bonar Law, secretary for the colonies, visited Folkestone yesterday to hold in the afternoon two inspections of the Canadian troops stationed in and about Shorncliffe. Major-General the Hon. Sir Arthur Hughes, representing the minister of militia, Colonel Watson, Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Max Aitken, M. P., and others traveled with Mr. Law by the boat train from London.

The scene of the first inspection was Baginbun Farm, some three or four miles out of Folkestone. Beechboro, the headquarters of the Canadian troops, is situated on the bank of the river, the seat of Sir Arthur Hughes, representing the minister of militia, Colonel Watson, Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Max Aitken, M. P., and others traveled with Mr. Law by the boat train from London.

With the cavalry, artillery and cyclists these masses of men made a magnificent spectacle in repose, as on the appearance of Mr. Law they stood at attention, presented arms, and returned to the slope. In movement they were more impressive still.

Mr. Law and General Hughes, having driven down the long line in a motor-car, took their places by the flag, and the march-past began. The cavalry and artillery took no part in this, and the distance the guns could be seen wheeling of the ground; but as the infantry went by, platoon after platoon, the officers saluting and the men turning "eyes right," their fine physique, their smartness, and their organization were unmistakable. To look up the long ground was to see the bayonets gleaming down on the spectators like a shimmering wave of steel. The moving masses gave, too, a great impression of numbers, although these thousands are only a drop in the bucket of what Canada has given and of what she is willing to give.

From Beechboro Park Mr. Law, General Hughes, General Watson, and other officers went by motor-car to the celebrated Moore Plains. The Canadians at present stationed there include mounted rifles, artillery and infantry.

All these troops were drawn up on the plain, and, considering its size and its fullness, the spectacle proclaimed even more eloquently than the preceding inspection the extent of Canada's contribution to the empire's army. The crowd of spectators here was larger than at Beechboro, and it included not a few Canadian soldiers who have been wounded at the front and are waiting their turn to go out again. As usual, the killed regiments roused great enthusiasm. Highlanders from Montreal and Winnipeg, they marched to the pipes with all the pride and vigor of the old country's Scots troops.

While the march past was in progress a halt was called and the "officers' call" on the bugle brought all the officers of the Canadian troops to the front. Mr. Law, who made them a short speech. He referred to his pride in being in the presence of the Canadian troops, and his hearers on the troops under their command, spoke of Canada's sacrifices and Canada's achievements, and expressed the general hope of a glorious future. Then at the order "hats off" there were three ringing cheers for the king and three more for the colonial secretary.

At night Mr. Law addressed at the Drill Hall, Folkestone, a great gathering of the Canadian troops.

He said that after the war things would never be quite the same as before. Already by an arrangement between the mother country and the self-governing dominions, it was understood that when the time came for peace negotiations the dominion governments were to have a say in those negotiations. That meant a great step onwards, but it was only a step. It had long been his hope, and was now his belief, that as a result of this war the time would come when the whole of the self-governing dominions, in proportion to their population and resources, would share with the mother country in the duty and honor of governing the British empire. (Cheers.) As to the future course of the war, the road might be steep and long, but the end was not in doubt, and that end was victory. There was only one chance of victory for Germany and that was separate peace with one of the allies. That was no chance at all. The allies were pledged to make peace together.

Hearty laughter was aroused at a "scarcely funny" Vitaphone comedy which was shown. It was entitled "Booby's Baby," and there was a laugh through-out every inch of its length. The 10th episode of "The Exploits of Elaine" was "The Life Current," which showed the heroine in peril through the machinations of "The Clutching Hand" aiming to destroy Craig Kennedy through the medium of "the poisoned kiss." This show will be repeated for the last time today.

ROOSEVELT PLAYS U. S. FOR WAR ATTITUDE

Pittsburgh, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Theodore Roosevelt in an address tonight at the military instruction camp here, declared that for thirteen months the United States had "played an ignominious part among the nations." In that it had "lambly submitted to seeing the weak, whom we had vowed to protect, wronged," and "had seen our own men, women and children murdered on the high seas without action on our part." The former president condemned the government for having "not taken the smallest step in the way of preparedness to defend our own rights." Germany, he condemned as "utterly brutal and ruthless in its disregard of international morality" and declared that it "would be a base abandonment of morality" for the United States to make shipments "for the use of the armies that are striving to restore Belgium to its own people." Munition makers who refused to make a "roll of dishonor." He added that they should be encouraged "so that they may be able to hold out our own when the hour of peril comes to us in our turn."
