MR. BOURASSA

When Mr. Henri Bourassa reminds his English speaking fellow citizens that the French people of Quebec have their roots deep down in the soil of their beloved Canada, and have behind them the traditions of many generations of French in Canada; and that therefore they cannot be expected to survive national problems with the eye of an Englishman, he is on safe ground. Statements of that kind tend to ally prejudice, because they enable his English speaking hearers to get nearer the viewpoint of their French-speaking fellow citizens.

But the rule should work both ways. Mr. Bourassa should be willing to recognize that the British in Canada have their traditions and their ideals, and that he who would attain to the stature of a national leader must be in the largest sense national in his views and aspirations.

In his newspaper, Mr. Bourassa is extremely sectional. He is the strenuous advocate of things French as against things British in Canada. An article in Le Devoir this week urges French-Canadians to withhold business from English banks and give it to French banks, because certain ecclesiastical appointments in the Roman Catholic church have not pleased Mr. Bourassa and his friends.

This is worse than folly. It is mischievous. It tends to create racial prejudice, and to postpone the day of perfect harmony between the races making up the bulk of Canadian citizenship. Mr. Bourassa plays with fire. He cannot expect other than the usual result.

CHEAPER CABLES

Touching the question of imperial unity there is wisdom in the following article from the Ottawa Free Press:—

"There has recently been held in London, England, a gathering of the Institute of Journalists, at which there was a very good representation of the newspaper men and women from overseas. Among the subjects discussed was that in which we are so much interested, a reduction of cable rates, and it is worth while emphasizing the fact that the chief delegate from Australia, Mr. Robert McMillan, of Sydney, put the case in a nutshell, when he said that if the British people, who spent £20,000,000 a year for defence, were to put a few millions into the cable system, they would be binding the Empire into one great united body. They then would be one people in deed and in truth. But they had left the cables to private enterprise, and they charged them 3s. a word. If only someone would rise up and say that instead of Dreadnoughts next year they would give them better cable communication, it would be a magnificent thing. What they wanted was that the whole Empire should be bound round with electric cables that would make them one people with one flag and one throne. Dreadnoughts are doubtless necessary, but as a means of uniting the Empire an improved cable system would be worth dozens of Dreadnoughts."

THE WEST AND THE TARIFF

The high tariff journals of the Conservative party will be compelled to renege on the Winnipeg Telegram (Conservative), which has been expressing itself with some vigor on the close relation of high protection to truth and forms of robbery. We quote:—

"What, then, is the effect of a duty raised above the protective point? Take, for example, an article whose selling price from a foreign country is 100, and whose cost of manufacture, selling cost, and profit at home is 104. If a duty of five points be placed upon it, foreign manufacturer and home manufacturer can sell on equal terms at 105, but the home manufacturer can sell at 104. That is protection. If, however, a duty of 20 points be placed upon the article, foreign manufacturer and home manufacturer can sell on equal terms at 120, but the home manufacturer can sell at 119. That is robbery. And by means of combination the home manufacturer does sell at just the lowest point which will keep out foreign competition."

This, from a Conservative journal, is remarkably plain speaking, and quite different from that which represents the home manufacturer as a public benefactor. He is here plainly told that he is disposed to squeeze every cent out of a purchaser that the tariff on his line of goods will permit, and that the consumer's remedy is a reduced tariff. The farmers are not the only people in the west who would look with favor upon a downward revision of the Canadian tariff.

ferent from that which represents the home manufacturer as a public benefactor. He is here plainly told that he is disposed to squeeze every cent out of a purchaser that the tariff on his line of goods will permit, and that the consumer's remedy is a reduced tariff. The farmers are not the only people in the west who would look with favor upon a downward revision of the Canadian tariff.

"Back to Little River" is again the slogan of the water department. When will the Loch Lomond service be made constant and secure?

An Associated Press despatch states that Washington only awaits word from Ottawa to begin negotiations for reciprocity. The tables are turned.

In order to understand his specifications it appears to be necessary for a tenderer to be able to read the mind of the city engineer, as in the case of the English channel.

An Ottawa despatch intimates that there is an early prospect of better steamship service between Canada and the West Indies. St. John would benefit from such an arrangement.

An island in mid-ocean would be a very good location for the Shiloh colony of Sanford, of the Holy Ghost and Us society. Let it be a volcanic island, somewhere in the south sea.

The telephone rates are to be the subject of enquiry by the Public Utilities Commission. That body is at last to have something to do. No doubt the members will welcome the opportunity to do some real work.

The Board of Trade banquet to President Hays of the Grand Trunk Pacific should be a notable event. The citizens will be glad to welcome a great railroad man, whose company it is hoped will bring much trade to this port. It is well to establish cordial relations at the outset.

The Ottawa Free Press says "The Montreal Gazette, vigorous critic though it is of Hon. Mr. Pugsley, at times, agrees that the Attorney-General of New Brunswick has a duty to perform in connection with the New Brunswick Coal and Railway Company. If he wants the facts to come out, he has the legal right to move, and the people will expect him to use that right. It's up to J. D. Hazen."

Roosevelt's candidate has been chosen as the Republican candidate for the New York governorship. Roosevelt and Carr carried their whole ticket in the convention. Henry L. Stimson, the candidate for governor was the district attorney who successfully prosecuted the sugar trust when Roosevelt was president. He is only 43 years old, a brilliant lawyer and a man of high character. After his nomination he received messages of congratulation from President Taft and Governor Hughes. His chances of election would seem to be excellent, for the reason that his attitude toward the trusts should commend him to many Democrats.

The statement that if a fire occurred in the public hospital under present conditions of water supply the results would be disastrous is one that calls for immediate action. It is stated that the present water pipe, laid when the hospital was half its present size, is old and unsafe. To provide an adequate service would cost $2,400. This is a mere trifle when we think of the absolute necessity of providing such an institution with every safeguard. The danger of fire is of course remote, but that does not absolve the municipality from its duty to provide an ample water supply that could be depended on in case of emergency.

BRIDES ARE LARGE LAND OWNERS

Young Ladies Who Won Choice Homesteads in Western United States, Happily Married

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 29.—Miss Mabel McNickle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McNickle, of Chicago, who won first choice of a homestead on the Spokane Indian reservation at the government drawing last summer, and Miss Ella T. Maloney, formerly of Iowa, winner of a farm on the Coeur d'Alene reserve, near Harrison, Idaho, and Charles Custer, of Spokane, who located her claim, were married here on September 22. The wedding of the first named took place at the home of Justice Samuel A. Mann, whose campaign for congress Miss McNickle managed. Charles McNickle, the bride's athletic brother, was the best man. Mr. Custer and his bride exchanged vows in St. Alois church, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Father George P. Butler. The two couples will live on their claims. When the claim winners were announced by the government last fall, the two brides received proposals of marriage from several thousand bachelors in various parts of the United States and Canada, but neither chose her life partner from among them.

EVERY ONE SEEMS TO BE TAKING "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Demand Always Increasing—Because "Fruit-a-Tives" Cures.

The real value of any article may be judged by the demand for it. Steadily increasing sales are the surest indication of intrinsic merit. This applies to a medicine as well as to a breakfast food. THE WORTH OF A BOY

Here is a boy, how much is he worth? Shining with laughter and bubbling with mirth?

Here is a boy, how much will you give To have him to help you to struggle and live?

The worth of a boy—ah, who can compute. The infinite treasure that in him is found!

Here is a boy, how much would you say For lift of his laughter and soul of his play?

Now for a bargain if ever you knew The value of music and beauty of dew; Boy, how much more for a boy, Bubbling with mischief and beaming with joy?

Sell him by weight or sell him by measure, What is he worth in your matter of treasure? Who can compute it, his value, his worth, His sunbeam of life 'mid the shadows of earth?

One little fellow, how much do you say For millions of mornings and mountains of play?

What is it worth to you, not just his size, Not his mere music, his mouth or his eyes?

What is he worth, with his fun and his zest, His hands on your cheek and his head on your breast? Boy like a bubble and boy like a gleam, Boy, how much more for a boy, can you tell, can you dream?

—The "Bentzon Bard" in Baltimore Sun.

IN LIGHTER VEIN

When other hands shall hook your dress And other eyes shall see— And other lips shall whisper low, my dear, Then you'll remember me.

A FAILURE

"How did their divorce case come out?" "Very unsatisfactory. The judge gave her a decree, but stipulated that she must wait two years before marrying again."

UNREGENERATE

"It was to satisfy your extravagant taste," cried the desperate man, "that I committed the forgery. The crime is upon your head."

The woman started and gazed at him wonderingly. "Is my crime on straight?" she asked.—"Success Magazine."

EXPRESSIVE

One day little George's father brought home some Rogoogoo cheese. Upon being asked how he liked it, George replied with all seriousness, "Papa, it tastes just like the animal cages at the circus."

"Success Magazine."

THE AWFUL CHANGE

I could not bear the change of the seasons—the spring and the summer and fall— But a thing that they bring is a thing, by jing, I can never get used to at all. The budding trees or the baring bushes with no such dreary change strike, As that new hat that my wife must get and I've got to learn to like.

—T. E. M.

ADVICE

My son, I've travelled round the world, And many maidens I've met; There are two kinds you should avoid— The blonde and the brunette.

—Life.

My son, I, too, have travelled far, And many wives I've seen; Two sorts there are that you should bar— The fat—and then the lean.

—Nashville Tennessean.

My boy, to these add one more set; Of my they'll never make sport; Just see you don't fall in the net Of tall ones nor of short.

—St. Louis Times.

And lad, avoid another pair: They'll think you are a bore, But of their winsome wiles beware— The rich one and the poor.

—Youngstown Telegram.

It is thought that the old Caymans all over mines in Peru are situated at a greater elevation than any other big mine in the world. Their altitude varies between 14,000 and 17,000 feet. They were worked by the Spaniards in the 16th century and before that, it is believed, by the Incas.

SHE DROPPED HIS "H"

The orchestra on the steel pier was playing selections from the most popular Italian operas. The moonlight on the waters was beautiful, while the boardwalk in the far distance was a kaleidoscope shifting of humanity and multi-colored lights.

The young man had only that afternoon registered at a beach view hotel, while his fair companion had been summing at a house in Virginia avenue. They met that evening by appointment. The mother, acting as a dutiful chaperon, had wandered away to the auditorium, leaving the young folks to themselves and the beautiful ocean.

WHY SHE WAS ANXIOUS.

This conversation really took place the other night between a man and his wife who live out in Lakewood.

"Have you fastened up all the windows and the door to the summer kitchen?" she inquired, as they were about to retire for the night.

"Sure," he replied, "but what's the use? I have you the last dollar I had day before yesterday to pay for that new dress of yours."

"Oh, yes, but it's in the lower drawer of the dresser in the front bedroom, just where the burglars would be most likely to get in, and they might ransack the drawers and get the dress all messed up and ruined."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Many a man sees his duty in time to dodge it.
