Fables On Health

PULSE STIMULATION
A MODERATELY slow pulse is no disadvantage, and should not cause half so much worry as it does, Mr. Mann of Anytown learned.
It is rather an indication of a strong heart, provided the slow pulse is natural. If, however, the pulse has become slow as the result of disease, then there is a cause for worry, and a physician should be called.
Sometimes a slow pulse is caused from liver disorder, from excessive use of tobacco, coffee and other narcotics. Also it may be caused from anemia and the use of headache powders.
Treatment of a slow pulse consists, first in removal of the cause, and second in application of measures calculated to improve the heart's action.
If the patient is young and of vigorous constitution, the pulse may be stimulated by cold baths, cold douches and cold mitten friction of the skin.

These treatments should increase the activity of the heart.
Caution should be taken when the person is known to have a weak heart, which often is shown by a shortness of breath, blueness of the lips or swelling of the ankles.

Adventures of the Twins

By OLIVE ROBERTS BANTON.

THE SCISSOR GRINDER.
"Now that the Rag man and the Un-working cross-word puzzles that I haven't looked at the date since last November," said the March Hare to the Twins, "it is high time that we got the Scissor Grinder started, too."
"Where does he live?" asked Nancy. "In the winter he lives on Do Nothing Street in Wait-awhile Town. That's where he is now. We'll go there right away."
So the Twins hopped on the March Hare's back, and away he went lippety loppety, hop to Do Nothing Street in Wait-awhile Town. And there they were, right at the Scissor Grinder's door.
"Come in," said the Scissor Grinder's voice when they knocked.
Without waiting to be asked twice they went right in.
"How d' do?" said he.
"How d' do?" said everybody.
"Sit down," invited the Scissor Grinder, setting chairs.
The March Hare took out his watch and looked at it uneasily. "Thankee kindly, sir, but really we shouldn't—there isn't any time to lose. You should have been started long ago."
"What?" cried the Scissor Grinder. "Why? What time is it? I've been busy 'Why what time is it? I've been busy" children need them for doll clothes and cut-outs and everything."

"I'll go at once," declared the Scissor Grinder. "I'll put on my old clothes and oil my grinder and be off this very minute."
And if you listen, my dears, most any fine day you may hear a voice calling out, "Scissors to grind! Scissors!" So have your all handy when he comes your way.
