A VOTE FOR COERCION.

The division of the house of commons on the coercion clause of the so-called autonomy bill contains no surprises unless the member for the Yukon was unless the member for the Borden amendment. Every Nova Scotia member in parliament voted to refuse Nova Scotia enjoys, and which no power would be allowed to wrest from her. So it is decided by a large majority that for all time to come the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan shall have laid on them the burden of this Ottawa legislation. No matter how great these provinces may become, no matter how strong may be the desire for a school system somewhat different from that dictated by an outside authority, there will be no escape. These have given with regret their first important vote in this parliament, but if they live long they will see greater cause for sorrow. For it is certain that if parliament goes on with this policy it will make a grave mistake and one that cannot be rectified. It is making every disagreement, on the separate school question in either of the new provinces for all time to come a dispute for the whole of Canada. If Mr. Borden's policy, so eloquently and forcibly supported last night by the member for John, were adopted, any trouble would at the worst be a local trouble. Henceforth the whole dominion is implicated in the school question of these two new provinces which are just as well able to regulate these matters as the province of New Brunswick. Thus not only are the provinces ST. MR. SUTHERLAND AND HIS SUC-CESSOR.

One of the most sagacious and popular members of the Laurier ministry has passed away. Hon. James Sutherland, late minister of public works, has been cut off in the prime of political life. After more than twenty years of service in parliament, including ten years of strenuous work in the position of chief liberal whip, Mr. Sutherland attained, in part at least, the object of his reasonable and laudable ambition. He was called to the cabinet, and after a time became head of a department. Mr. Sutherland could hardly have been satisfied with the despoilment of the public works department, as it was handed over to ence transferred to Mr. Prefontaine, but he was above all things a loyal Unfortunately he had little opportunity to test his capacity as an adminis-
