

THE CHRONICLE. SAINT JOHN, AUGUST 6, 1841.

We have already pronounced our opinion, that should a conservative ministry be called, by Sir Robert Peel at its head, to the helm of affairs in this country, there will not be any new law...

RESULT OF THE ELECTIONS.

From the London Standard of Saturday. We continue to borrow from the Morning Chronicle a summary of the results of the elections...

Table with 2 columns: Reformers, Tories. Rows include English boroughs, English counties, Ireland, Scotland, and Total.

The reformers have gained 37 seats, of which 13 are in a Welsh county, and 3 in Scotch counties...

The English borough returns include the double return for Hereford and as Mr. O'Connell returned for the counties of Meath and Cork...

This presents a majority of 51 conservative upon 61 members returned, but the presence, we assume, of the Fenagh return, which increases the number of conservatives to 56, and the majority to 80...

STATE OF THE COUNTRY.

Whether the present government shall be able to continue its hold of the reins of office, or whether as events seem now to indicate a conservative administration shall succeed, is the position which the party which the management of the affairs of the British empire shall be deputed, cannot be deemed by the needful placation or most salutary lever of power to be one peculiarly suitable at the present juncture.

Looking beyond the domestic difficulties which must best be administered to which circumstances will have long considered the government of this country, what a vast field of adversity is presented in our foreign affairs...

It is the business of the statesman to be prepared to meet the emergency which may be presented to him, and to meet the emergency which may be presented to him, and to meet the emergency which may be presented to him...
