

Perfectly Balanced

The Dodge Wood Split Pulley is perfectly balanced.

This is but one of its strong points, however—its light—about one-third the weight of an iron pulley; it fastens to the shaft with ease and at any point along the line that you want it, without the necessity of taking any shafting down.

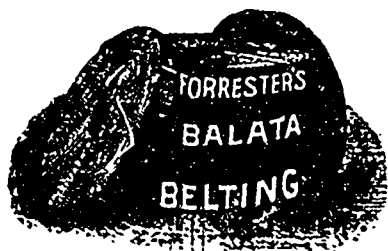

Then too, it fastens absolutely secure—and there are no set screws to throw your shaft out of line.

Then again the work of your boiler and engine is lightened, for equipped with Dodge Wood Split Pulleys, you carry only one-third the weight on your line as with iron pulleys.

If you are interested in reduced costs for power transmission, you'd better investigate the unnecessary outlay for coal you are now subjected to, by carrying 200 per cent. more weight on your shafting in iron pulleys than is necessary, when you use Dodge Wood Split Pulleys.

The Dodge System of Rope Transmission will solve many perplexing problems, if you have a large power used, and your plant covers an extensive area.
