"Why, yes, of course I am, my child; why shouldn't! Is there anything so strange about that?" "Oh, I am so glad! Now, Archie, won't you do me one little favor while you are there? Something I want you to do so much, for my sake?" "Why, of course, my darling, I will, your slightest wish is a command to me; tell me what it is, and I will do it before I attend to anything else. What is it you want me to do, my child?" "You are so good, Archie," said the girl, tenderly, while her voice sank to a whisper, "and I have set my heart on it, too; I want you to jump off of the Brooklyn Bridge!"

The French Taste for Onions. Paris Cor. New York Times. By the way, there exists a common fallacy that the French nation live on onions and whiteness, as even when dignified as soubise, bechamel, or by other titles, it is not shown in its single blessedness. It is put into everything, but it is usually withdrawn, like an uncleanly object, before presentation. I once met a gentleman at a seaside resort who refused the splendor of the table d'hote and had his own cook, just to avoid the use of onion or garlic in anything. He was a married man, and in his marriage contract article first stipulated that nothing of the kind should ever be used in his household. He assured me that it was quite possible to obtain high and exquisite flavor without the disreputable use of the perfumed ingredient, and he gave me some soup to demonstrate the statement, and the soup was very bad. The lower classes do eat leeks, mint, and garlic to flavor their dry, hard bread—for they always buy the latter at least one day old; it goes further thus, and is more nourishing. A French crowd is soon unbearable on this account, and the omnibuses inside are hard to enjoy, but, with all this, our favorite dish of boiled nr baked onion is never seen over here.

taste, consumes the cartilages of the nose, in the head," which causes an inflamand, unless properly treated, hastens its victim into Consumption. It usually indicates a scrofulous condition of the system, and should be treated, like chronic ulcers and eruptions, through the blood. The most obstinate and dangerous forms of this disagreeable disease cured by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I have always been more or less troubled with Scrofula, but never seriously until the spring of 1882. At that time I took a severe cold in my head, which, notwithstanding all efforts to cure grew worse, and finally became a chronic Catarrh. It was accompanied with terrible headaches, deafness, a continual coughing, and with great soreness of the lungs. My throat and stomach were so polluted with the mass of corruption from my head that Loss of Appetite, Dyspepsia, and Emaciation totally unfitted me for business. I tried meny of the in-called specifics for this disease, but obtained no relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using two bottles of this medicine, I noticed an improvement in my condition. When I had taken six bottles all traces of Catarrh disappeared, and my health was completely restored—A. B.
