Humor

Grocer: "Very sorry, ma'am. They were the best we could get. You see, all the young chickens were killed off for the holiday trade, so the old hens are the only ones left to do the laying."

Mrs. Youngbride: "Oh, to be sure! I hadn't thought of that."

Two hobos passing along the road killed a large snake, pounding the head to a pulp while the tail continued to wriggle.

"Is he dead?" gasped Bill.

"Yes, he's dead all right," answered Mike, "but he ain't conscious of it."

"To what do you attribute your remarkable age and your wonderful health?" asked the city doctor of the aged farmer.

"Wal," answered the country one, "I got a pretty good start on most people by bein' born afore germs was discovered, an' so I have had less to worry about."

Two sons of Erin were digging a ditch for a gas-main. One of them was a trifle handicapped by the shortness of the handle on his pick. His back was aching from bending over so far and he had paused for a moment, when his companion remarked:

"Say, Mike, phwat wud ye do ef ye had a million dollars?"

"I'd add four inches to the handle o' this pick," was the reply.

A sturdy Scot, 6 feet 5 inches in height, is a gamekeeper near Strathford. One hot day last summer he was accompanying a bumptious sportsman, of very small stature, when he was greatly troubled by gnats. The other said to him:

"My good man, why is it that the gnats do not trouble me?"

"I dursay," replied the gamekeeper, with a comprehensive glance at the other's small proportions, "it will be because they havna' seen ye yet!"

A minister, like his father before him, had often officiated at marriage ceremonies, but this was his first experience at giving away the bride.

He was in a devout mood; his church was small, his salary meager, and his family numerous. This daughter had been especially expensive.

"Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?" droned the preacher.

Gently the father placed the slender hand of the bride in that of the embarrassed groom.

"Take her, my boy," he exclaimed, his face aglow. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Dad: "Sammy, did you put your nickel in the contribution box in Sunday-school to-day?"

Sammy: "No, Dad; I asked Billy Jones, the preacher's son, if I couldn't keep it and spend it for candy, and he gave me permission."

Mrs. Crawford: "Haven't you ever discovered a way to get money out of your husband?"

Mrs. Crabshaw: "Oh yes. All I have to do is to threaten to go home to mother, and without a word he hands over the railway fare."

The quick wit of a travelling salesman who has since become a well-known proprietor was severely tested one day. He sent in his card by the office-boy to the manager of a large concern, whose inner office was separated from the waiting-room by a ground-glass partition. When the boy handed his card to the manager the salesman saw him impatiently tear it in half and throw it in the waste-basket; the boy came out and told the caller that he could not see the chief. The salesman told the boy to go back and get him his card; the boy brought out five cents, with the message that his card was torn up. Then the salesman took out another card and sent the boy back, saying: "Tell your boss I sell two cards for five cents."

He got his interview and sold a large bill of goods.
