AMERICA'S AID IN AERIAL WARFARE PRAISED BY MINISTER OF AERONAUTS

A very busy man is Mr. Daniel Vincent, Minister for Aeronautics, as I perceived when I called at his office in the Boulevard St. Germain. Officers and civilians rushed past me as I waited patiently for my turn to see the chief of France's great air service. All was business—that was evident. It resembled an office in Wall Street.

There appeared to have been some kind of conference of aeronautics, for I recognized several famous "aces" who have won distinction on the battle field. "They are such modest fellows," said an officer, who observed my attention fixed on these young and energetic Frenchmen who risk their lives so many times a day and night for the cause of their country. "They are really wonderful."

When introduced into the office of the Minister, I observed the quick movements and direct way of speaking. He is an outcome of this war in French politics. A man must be had who can do things quickly and well. Mr. Vincent is himself an expert aviator. That is why he gets through the business of his office so efficiently. In reply to my question whether he had a word of encouragement for our American airmen he replied:

"America Needs No Stimulating. Do you think America has any need of stimulation in this great matter? Her effort is remarkable and she has understood the necessity of aviation. No stimulation is, therefore, required. In regard to finance America has done everything that is requisite; in regard to the industrial side of the matter she has accomplished a splendid success in organization which bids fair to bear fruit. Already much has been done. In regard to personnel we know that a great number of young men want to enter aviation. No, America is stimulating herself to perform her part in the great battles of the air."

"I notice that figures are frequently given in connection with the aeroplane services—that is to say that at one time some people talk of 30,000 aeroplanes and another of 40,000 and some even speak of an immense army of 100,000 air craft. This is unwise. It is not useful at all to put into circulation by means of the press, any figures showing how many aeroplanes a country has or is American aeronauts, and I hope the best results will follow. They will remain there as long as necessary. It will be an encouragement to have our young men among the young Americans who push forward to join the aviation ranks. But, after all, the best encouragement is example, don't you think?"

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

At the regular September meeting of the Board of Directors of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. held Thursday evening, the summer's work was reviewed by the General Secretary, Mr. P. F. Brockel. The work has really recovered for he spent most of the time in hospital although he had younger boys in view of the fact, but Farm Service movement, special but, the authorities said he was not able to go to work.

The baths and swimming pool have been the big attraction throughout the summer, and it was shown that men, boys, girls and soldiers had made excellent use of these privileges. A total of 2,205 baths had been taken during the three months and thirty boys and eight girls had been taught to swim. Hikes for younger boys and war canoe trips have largely been features of the summer's program.

The directors discussed plans for carrying on the work and approved suggestions for a progressive program for every boy and man in the community.

The committees in charge of the various branches of the work reported progress in their plans for the Fall and it is expected that a very profitable time will be spent by all those who avail themselves of the privileges provided in this modern association building.

UNFORGETTABLE STORY IS TOLD IN SARAH BERNHARDT'S SUPREME PHOTOPLAY "MOTHERS OF FRANCE"

Scenes filmed in French trenches, scenes in ruined French villages, views of the ruined Rheims Cathedral and views in French Hospitals—all these are seen in "Mothers of France," the tremendous photodrama which comes to Griffin's next Monday and Tuesday, with a Special Matinee, Tuesday, with Sarah Bernhardt as the star. Never has such a picture been produced before, for never before was it able to secure the combination of the world's greatest actress in a drama written by one of the world's greatest authors about the greatest war of the world. Madame Bernhardt put her heart and soul into this picture as did Jean Richepin, the author, and Louis Mercanton, the producer and all members of the cast. Pictures of rare beauty, scenes of extreme pathos, are found in this production. The picture throughout has been produced on a plane of exceptional artistry. From an artistic standpoint alone you should not miss this production. And when it is realized that this will probably be the last motion picture in which Madame Bernhardt ever ap-

BERT POST DIED IN ENGLAND

Gallant Young Soldier Wounded Over One Year Ago—Is Second of Family to Give Life for the Empire

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Post, 27 Front Street, this morning received the sad intelligence that their son, private Bert Post, had died in Moore Barracks Hospital, England, on Sunday, Sept. 9th. The cause of death was not given. This family have surely paid the full price for on Sept. 13th, 1916, one year ago tomorrow, their son, William Post, was killed in action in France. Today's message has filled the home with grief.

Bert Post went overseas with the 5th C.M.R. on Oct. 8th, 1915 with his brother William. Bert was wounded in the fighting in France on June 3rd, 1916, and had never Mr. P. F. Brockel. The work has really recovered for he spent most of the time in hospital although he had younger boys in view of the fact, but Farm Service movement, special but, the authorities said he was not able to go to work.

DAMAGE BY FROST NOT SO SERIOUS

Ald. W. B. Deacon has just returned from an automobile trip of 80 miles through the County of Hastings, going to Tweed, Madoc and elsewhere in the north. He reports that the effects of Sunday night's freeze are not as serious as were at first anticipated. He found the majority of fields of corn and potatoes still green and injured very slightly or not at all. Considerable buckwheat was already cut and much of the remainder ripe and therefore beyond the danger of any damage from frost.

G. T. R. ENGINEER DROPPED DEAD

James Storris Expired in Belleville Yard This Morning. Death came with awful suddenness this morning to James Storris, Grand Trunk Engineer, as he was about to leave the office on reporting for duty. He sank helplessly to the ground and expired immediately. Death was due to heart failure. The news of his death was a shock to all his associates and friends.

Born in Belleville in the year 1874 he was 43 years and 3 months of age. He was considered one of the most careful engineers on the G.T.R., having been in the passenger service. Latterly he was acting as yard engineer. He was a Methodist in religion. Fraternally he was a member of the Belleville Division of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Mourning his death are his widow, who was formerly Miss Gaffney, and six children, two sons, Douglas and Lyle, and four daughters, Irene, Dorothy, Ada and Helen, at home on Reid Street.

James Storris was universally respected among citizens in general and railwaymen in particular. The grand finale of the Pictorial Fair will be a Dance in the Armouries on the night of Thursday, September 30th. Magnificent dance bands, unlimited floor space, splendid ventilation, will make for dancing under the most ideal conditions. This will be an entirely informal affair and the directors hope that a crowd from Belleville and the surrounding district will take in this event.

THE THEATRICAL SEASON OPENED

Albert Brown Achieved a Triumph With His New Play "The Love of a King"

The theatrical season for Belleville opened last night with an audience at Griffin's that filled the house almost to capacity. It was a pleased, in fact a delighted audience that went away.

Mr. Brown on previous appearances here played semi-comic roles, notably in "The White Feather" and "The Black Feather."

Last night, Mr. Brown gave an evidence of versatility of new histrionic powers of a high order. His characterization last night of the romantic "Prince George" was as unlike as possible the droll, naive Englishmen in his previous plays. We like him even better in his later appearance.

Last night's performance called to mind such past masters as J. H. Stoddart, Richard Mansfield and Joe Jefferson. This highly difficult and faultless presentation at once placed Mr. Brown in the foremost rank of living actors.

Mr. Brown's support was admirable. Miss Lenore Phelps, who played the part of the sweet and winsome Quaker girl, Hannah Lightfoot, gave a most charming interpretation of the character. In the deeply emotional parts she was neither starchy nor over sentimental. She carried the audience with her, naturally and unaffectedly.

The less important roles were perfectly fitted to the cast. "The Love of a King" takes one back to the year 1760 in British history. The playwright takes many liberties with the traditional impressions we have of George III. But he has given a play as clean and wholesome as a bright morning in June, and in Mr. Brown's admirable company he has an organization of interpreters that satisfy to the minutest detail.

THE OPENING OF THE SCHOOLS

Is the time to make sure that your child is not handicapped by any error of vision, in one or both eyes. It is a mistake to hesitate fearing that if you put glasses on a child they will always have to wear them. If the error is small by wearing glasses when young, they frequently outgrow the trouble, and if large, the wearing of glasses is a necessity to their future welfare. We advise glasses when necessary. Alexander Ray, Opt. D., Exclusive Eye-Sight Specialist.
