POOR DOCUMENT

QUEENS COUNTY GAZETTE, GAGETOWN, N. B., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1898.

"Nor I," said Edwin.

was her escort.

to do some day-would she do that?

known each other for a life

ed in Edwin Lawrence's arms, her pretty

At the sight of Uncle Jack, they sud-

"Why, why! What's all this?" cried

Uncle Jack, taking off his hat, and wip-

"It's all right, uncle," said - Edwin

"Alice and I have just been making a

"And what is your little bargain, if

Edwin came forward, put his arm

"It is only to take each other for better or worse, for all our lives," he said.

"Will you give us your consent and bles

They little guessed what a bright dream was suddenly demolished forever,

"Yes, yes! I give both, and may you

Then the good old fellow trotted out

"I might have known it! I might have known it! And it's all for the best!

And that was the only moan poor

Uncle Jack made over his lost hope. It every joy that one has, another must suffer. It is a pity that hearts, as well as bodies, do not grow old and cease to care

To The Heirs of Anneke Jans Who

Are Readers of The Times.

100 members of the Anneke Jans International Stock Co., of Cleveland, O., assembled in convention on March 29.

The sessions were three, taking two days,

and proved to be very pleasant and harmonious. Everyone was pleased with the work done during the protracted recess by the corresponding secretary and trustees for the heirs, and many compliments were tendered Mrs. Jennie Kep-

Great precaution was taken to avoid the disturbing elements, which are generally sent in by our enemies for the Tickets were issued, which admitted all stockholders to the church in which the meeting was held. This time Trinity's projects were upset, and they obtained no foothold. The meeting passed with perfect harmony, and all were jubipurpose of discouraging the weak ones.

of the room, and left them alone. As he as Uncle Jack said, brokenly:-

went, he said to himself :--

All for the best, no doubt!"

for happiness

around her, and led her to Uncle Jack.

may know?" asked poor Uncle Jack.

Edwin!"

Poor, dear, foolish old Uncle Jack!

Litersture.

Have Known It. BY MATTIE DYER BRITTS.

"Is it much farther, Mr. Erskine?" "No. Only five or six miles now. Are you getting tired, Alice?"

"Oh, no. It was not that!" And brought it to his uncle last summer. Edthere were tears in the dark, lovely eyes win is a wild boy but he's got a good which the young girl raised to the rough, heart in him for all that." kindly face of the elderly gentleman who "Is it a good picture?" asked Alice. sat beside her in the carriage. "Very good. You'll see him at

"What was it then, Alice?" "Mr. Erskine-' "Stop a moment, child. You are go-

Somehow Alice took a glance at the were about to part. ing home with me now, to be my ward, picture in the parlor a good many times and to live with me, and be as happy as after that. It would be rather pleasant you can. That "Mr. Erskine" is too to have a young person about the house. formal for home use. Can't you say To be sure Uncle Jack and Mrs. Conner uncle, for a moment, and make a second Uncle Jack, as Ed Lawrence does, when were good and kind, but then it was a lit- mistake?" he's at home?" tle dull, and a young companion would

"Indeed I can, if you will let me, liven up things, especially as he was good Alice, blushing. Uncle Jack!" said the girl, smiling through looking-if the portrait was a correct one, the tears. "I can do anything to make as Mrs. Conner said. I make the mistake?" you happy, since you are doing so much So Alice began rather to long for for me. And it is just that I want 'o Christmas to come. As for Uncle Jack, Mr. Edwin very quickly stooped and took and hereafter be guarded when beyond speak of. Don't think I don't feel grate- he seemed to be growing younger and one kiss from her red lips before they the danger line. ful for and appreciate your kirdness to happier every day. It needed no nephew parted.

me in this heavy trouble, because I can't or any one else to make him contented. After he was gone letters came very thank you in fine words, as some would Ah, kind, foolish Uncle Jack! What often to Alice, over which she smiled and do. I feel it in my heart, Uncle Jack, wild dreams were-running through your blushed a great deal. yes, indeed I do!"

asions, and added many touches there. Over the stately old-fashioned sofa there hung a portrait of a handsome

It could never have been Uncle Jack--

"Mrs. Conner, who's this?" she asked,

"That is Mr. Erskine's nephew, Edwin Lawrence," said Mrs. Conner. "He Christmas, and can judge for yourself," and it looked too new, besides."

standing before it, one day.

said Mrs. Conner

s, indeed I do!" "There, there, Alice! I am sure you head, those days? This bright young presence around his saying he would soon follow it. But Jaus and her second husband, Averardo, but after all the kindness is on my child's side, not mine. Don't you know plonely old home will be the brighter for the presence of a lively young girl?" Alice he had known so lorg ago, it brought back the hopes of that past time, and renewed them again. Was it too

"I will certainly try to make it so," late? Might not this second Alice bring these days. His dream was taking tang- poration. These sell at the price of 50 said Alice. yet the joy the first one had failed to "You will do it without trying, Alice. do." For many a day I have missed young . Ah, Uncle Jack! Do you vainly dream as good as her word, and do anything he Jennie Kepler and the maps, the whole voices in its old halls. For a few weeks that May and December can never come would ask her. every year, at Christmas and his summer together?

vacation, Ed Lawrence comes, but all the Christmas was drawing near, cold and he opened the door at home, fully decid- her. She will soon have more photo rest of the year, there's nobody but the servants, the old housekeeper Mrs. Con-to make some purchases, with Uncle So here goes!" "But I can't help it. graphs, and also photograph Prince of Orange.

kind that day. He had supplied her with amused as Alice did confused.

But oh! horrors! The next instant she

"It isn't Uncle Jack, but he thanks

The stranger held out his hand, but

Nor did she come back, until Uncle

rence, his nephew, who had come sooner

It was a very stiff greeting that Alice gave him. The more so because though his mouth was so grave, a merry twinkle

Lawrence, by the fire. Alice was for run-

"Please, Miss Redfield," he said

"don't put me into your black books entirely. You will spoil my Christmas if "I don't wish to do that," said Alice,

"Don't apologize at all. I assure you

I didn't mind it in the least," said Edning again. But he stopped her.

you do.

than he expected.

be retained by all, but the association It happened that Uncle Jack was just will retain their genealogist to still concoming into the room; and heard these tinue their proof work. The fee for that young fellow with merry eyes and a dark last words. He smiled to himself. There remains as it was, and Mrs. Kepler will nustacke which interested Alice greatly. was a thing he was hoping to ask Alice look after your records.

The prospect is bright for an early settlement of the Harlem and also the Hol-The Christmas holidays passed like a land claims. Mrs. Kepler will met Gen. dream to Alice. There were sleigh rides | Hart at New York and confer with hir and parties, and to all, as Uncle Jack regarding the best interests of all, and in seldom went out of an evening, Edwin a few days, or rather weeks, will embark for Amsterdam and Rotterdam to look It was wonderful how well acquainted after the heirs' claims there.

the young people grew in the three weeks Burglars of some sort tried to effect an he stayed, and it seemed as if they had entrance at the headquarters, 618 Jennings avenue, on the last night of the Perhaps that accounted for a little accimeeting, before all had departed for their dent which took place in the hall as they homes. Mr. Frank Drake of Cuttus, Ont., and heirs from Michigan were still "Good-by Alice," said Edwin with her there. A force of police was detailed to hand in his, then leaning near her he watch the house until morning. It was whispered, "Can't you imagine I am supposed they were not seeking money particularly, but had their eyes on the valuable papers, held by Mrs. Kepler, "Oh, no! I know you are not he!" said which had been the result of many years hard labor on her part. This is the third "Well, then," persisted Edwin, "may attempt which had been made to rob her in this way, but she watches them with "I don't care!" whispered Alice, and an eagle's eye, and she will watch them

> All heirs are urged now to unite their interests as one and help bring about a settlement of the Holland and Harlem claim at once.

Uncle Jack was thinking a great deal, ground, now held by Trinity church corible shape, and at last he determined to cents each. The full set of pictures, An-tell Alice, and see whether she would be neke Jans and Bogardus, and also Mrs. outfit, pictures and maps, for $2.00. Any "I know I'm an old fool!" he said, as one wishing them can procure them from

The Queens County Gazette will be issued from the office of Jas. A. Stewart.

In time for Despatch by the earliest mails of the day.

The Subscription price will be ner, and myself. Now you will come, Jack. They were expecting Mr. Lawand you shall have all the young com-rence in a few days. His room was ready ing to find Alice there. And met a sight work. The officers of our union, which pany you choose, and we'll make things upstairs, and Mrs. Conner had planned most surprising! Yes, Alice was there, is called the Anneke Jans Bogardus Insome of his favorite dishes, but he had standing by the hearth, comfortably clasp. "You are so kind, Uncle Jack!" mur- not yet arrived. It was late when Alice and Uncle Jack | head resting on his shoulder. mured Alice.

"1 mean to be, to you, child. I don't got home, so while he went to the sitting want ever to let you regret coming among room, Alice ran at once up to her own denly parted. Alice retreated to the chamber, to put away her, purchases be- back of a chair. Edwin stood leaning

"I shall never do that, I am sure!" said fore supper. Uncle Jack had been most against the mantel, looking as much Alice. They were silent for the the unlimited money for her own needs, and given her several nice presents. Mr. Erskine was looking out of the Alice was very grateful, and as she ran ing from his brow the sudden perspira carriage window, but he was not seeing downstairs again, she resolved to express tion which had started there. the beautiful mountain scenery they were her gratitude in a way she knew he would passing. He was thinking of the time, like. years ago, when he, a young man, stood The lamps were not yet lighted in the little bargain, that's all!" beside Alice Redfield's mother, another sitting room but the fire cast a red glow Alice, so like herself, and heard her prom- over the old furniture, and over some one ise to be his bride when he returned from sitting by the fireside. itting by the fireside. Alice slipped up quietly, bent over sud-dear, kind friend," said Alice. "Tell him his next voyage.

He remembered how he had returned. denly, and kissed the person in the chair and found Alice Malcolm false to him, on the mouth, saying:and wedded to young Squire Redfield, a "That's for thanks, Uncle Jack!"

richer lover than her true-hearted sailor saw she had made a dreadful mistake!

He had never made any complaint, but The tall, slender figure which rose from the wound was deep. He returned to the chair was not Uncle Jack's burly sing, Uncle?" the sea, and followed it, until at fifty form! It was an entirely strange voice years old, he had retired, an honored which said, as Alice flung her hands over captain, to his old home to spend the her face. rest of his days in quiet.

He had never married. One day there you for such a kind welcome, all the always be happy, my dear children!" came to him a letter from Alice Redfield. She was a widow, with a small property, and she was now dying without a friend Alice turned and fled, to hide her burpon earth to whose care she could leave ing cheeks in her own room. her orphan daughter. Would Jack Erskine, for the sake of old times, forgive Jack himself called her to supper. Then, the wrong she had once done him, come when she walked sedately into the sitto her and accept the charge of her child, ting room, the lamps were lighted, and and the care of her small means? Uncle Jack introduced her to Edwin Law-

Rough and gruff as the old sea-captain was he had the kindest heart in the world. He could not resist such an appeal as that.

He went at once to the dying bed of his old sweetheart, and saw her laid in in his eye told her he had not forgotten the earth before he brought her daughter her dreadful blunder to his own home, a sacred charge.

But she could not help owning he was Mrs. Conner at first was a little disposvery handsome. And it was kind of him ed to be half-offended at the idea of a to address all his conversation to Uncle young mistress being set over her. But Jack, so as to set her at her ease. she soon discovered that Alice was not at She could not lose her constraint, howall inclined to be "bossy" and that someever, all the evening. And she was glad how the dark, old-fashioned rooms with when bedtime came, and she could hide their stiff, black haircloth furniture were her blushes again in her own room. growing wonderfully prettier since she Next morning she came down early as usual. And lo! there stood Mr. Edwin

Mr. Erskine, on his many voyages, had brought home all sorts of queer and curious things, but they had been stowed away in nooks and corners, and seldom saw the light.

One day Alice said :-"Uncle Jack, did you know this old house was just full of bric-a-brac?"

"but I-oh, how can I apologize for that "What's that? Brick bats? Yes, it's awful mistake!" And she turned scar. made of 'em child," said Uncle Jack. Alice laughed merrily.

"Now you know I don't mean that!" she cried. "It's all sorts of pretty things win. "Come, Miss Redfield, let's agree vases and jars and pipes and screens, and to forget it and be good friends, will I don't know what all! "Oh, those things," said Uncle Jack.

with 'em'.

He opened the sitting room door, hop. Dear heirs, let us hear from you in the > ternational Union, are as follows: D. E. Dozer, president, Defiance O. J. H. Drake, vice-president, Des Mornes, Iowa.

Mrs. Jennie Kepler, secretary. W. G. Vantilbourrough, Hanilet, Ind. A. A. VanRiper, St. Louis, Mich. S. H. Sackett, New London, O. W. B. Strong, Lincoln, Neb. J. W. Drake, Kingsville, Ont. Mrs. M. B. Strong, Champaign, Ill. W. Kaufman, Villanova, Ont. Alice Pierson, Unadılla, Neb. G. A. Johnson, Brownsville, Ind. Mary P. Thurneau, Oneaonta, N. Y. Mrs. Dr. Buys, Painesville, O. Mrs. Alice Pettibone. Cleveland, O. -Delray Times -- Michigan

Humorous The Elephant's Retort

A woman of tremendous avoirdupois entered a Broadway cable car breathles sly and selected eight or nine inches of space next to the man with the newspaper, in the corner.

As she sank firmly down and he began to suffer from the wedging process the passengers heard him remark quite audibly that he was not aware that "elephants" were allowed on this line. The fare collector was vainly endeavoring to conceal his delight when, after an embarrassing pause, there came a voice, deliberate, dignified, impressive: "Conductor, stop the car! There is an elephant and a hog aboard, and the elephant wishes to get off."-New York was but the way of the world. For World Teacher-What is the meaning of onetwenty-fifth?

Little Boy-I don't remember. Teacher-If you had twenty-five children visiting you. and only one apple for them, what would you do? Little Boy-I'd wait till they all went CLEVELAND, O., April 8, 1898.-About an' eat it myself.

Lady-So you fought with Sherman on his march to the sea? Here is a dollar for you, you noble patriot! Were you in a Massachusetts regiment? Tramp-Well, harcly, lady. I wuz in de Louisiana Tigers, an' de way we fought wid den Yanks wuz a caution. Author-I am troubled with insom

I lie awake at night hour after hour ler for her endeavors and her faithful- thinking about my literary work. His Friend-How very foolish of you!

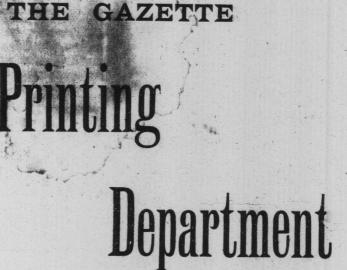

Why don't you get up and read portions Diggs-I just finished reading an ac-stake in ancient times. Such bacharism would not be tolerated in this enlightene

Biggs-No, indeed! The modern her etic is let of with a roast in the religiou journals.

lent over the beautiful prospect and the A bald-headed professor recently de is equipped with good press, new type nd a complete stock of material. We keep on hand a large and we assorted stock , all kinds of Stationery. We are in a position to do all kinds Job Printing, such as

Letter HLads,

Note Heads.

Bill Heads,

Statements,

Dodgers,

Posters,

count of how they burned heretics at the

you?" And he frankly held out his victories already accomplished. The hand. company decided to drop the stock plan, "Well if you like 'em do what you please Alice gave him hers for an instant, and and not call for the balance of stock, but livered a lecture entitled "The Air We Breathe" before an East London audimake it still easier on all by raising the "May I? Thank you. Then I'll have Jas. ence. In the course of his remarks he "Yes, for Uncle Jack's sake." money by monthly dues, of the small said: "It is quite impossible for any persome of them down in a twinkling," said "That will do for the present," said sum of 50 cents per month each, the son to live without air." At this a small Edwin. "When we know each other money so raised to go to carry on the boy called out: "Ow about yerself the girl. She searched among the treasures and better I hope it may be partly for my work. The amount which has been rais- guv'ner?" put here a quaint jar to hold flowers, own. I was so glad to hear that my ed is to be placed as a reserve fund to be there an old screen or a panel, a rich rug uncle had some one to brighten up this used in emergency cases at the discretion Publisher, "Yes, his sermons are tiresomely long, before the fireplace, queer boxes and dull old place for him." of the secretary but he always says something to the trinkets on mantels and shelves, and vast-"He has been so kind to me," said In the work there was a consolidation point." ly improved the looks of the old place. Alice warmly. "I could not do enough of interests and work with the association. "Well, what did he say to the point She even penetrated into the best par- for him in return. There is nothing I The Pacific coast association and Attor- last Sunday? Gagetown, N. B. lor which was only opened on great oc- would not do for him." ney General Hart, of San Francisco, will "In conclusion."

Envelopes, Business Cards Visiting Cards. Pamphlets,

Circulars,

Labels,

Tickets,

Tags,

Books.

Etc., Etc.

MAIL ORDERS PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO

Address all communications to

A. Stewart.