Don't Chide the Children.

Don't scold the little ones if the bed is wet in the morning. It isn't the child's fault. It is suffering from a weakness of the kidneys and bladder, and weak kidneys need strengthening—that's all. You can't afford to risk delay. Neglect may entail a lifetime of suffering and misery.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

strengthen the kidneys and bladder, then all trouble is at an end. Mrs. E. Kistner, a London, Ont., mother, living at 490 Gray St., says: "My little daughter, six years old, had bed wetting many months. Last winter I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Strong's drug store. Since taking them she has had no more kidney trouble of any kind. I gladly make this statement because of the benefit my child has received from this medicine."

MISCELLANEOUS.

An old man was sitting on the roof of his house in Kansas after the floods and was gazing placidly across the rushing waters.

"Washed all your fowls away?" asked the man in the boat.

"Yes, but the ducks swam," smiled the old man.

"Tore up your peach trees?"

"Don't mind it much. They said the crop would be a failure."

"But the flood! It's up to your windows!"

"Wal, them windows needed washing anyway, stranger."

Minard's Liniment relieves neuralgia.

"That is the bicyclist who has barked himself against me this morning," mused the wayside tree. "without hurting me a bit. Take it all in all, I am more skinned against than skinning."

ALTRUISM IN EDUCATION.

President Eliot goes on to say:

"The main reason why the natural bringing up of children on a farm is better than any artificial substitute which city schools can supply is that the children get, in a natural way, this training in altruism and co-operativeness, while they help father and mother in their daily labors. The money motive of productive labor is not always useful to children; but the co-operative, unselfish motive in production invariably has great moral value, no matter what the nature of the work may be, whether washing dishes, shelling peas, bringing wood for the stove, tending horses, driving the cows to pasture, or weeding the strawberry bed. Producing something useful by his own labor gives keen satisfaction to a child, just as it does to a man. . . . This wholesome human quality all schools ought to develop systematically from the beginning. There lies the solid foundation of the kindergarten methods. That is no merit of forging, carpentering, sewing, cooking, basketry and gardening as school work. One of the advantages for children of reciting poetry, telling stories, and writing letters is that in such exercises they not only absorb but give out. Enabling the children to make something or do something which is acceptable to other people ought to be a leading object at every school."

"How," howled the labor agitator, "can a man keep a large family on eight dollars a week?"

"Hungry," said a man who spoke confidently, as if from experience.

Worms affect a child's health too seriously to neglect. Sometimes they cause convulsions and death. If you suspect them to be present, give Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup, which destroys the worms without injuring the child. Price 25c.

The Utilitarian in Education.

(Sacred Heart Review.)

In an article on "The School," contributed by President Eliot of Harvard University to the Atlantic Monthly for November, we find the following remarks: "The contempt in which cultivated persons have habitually held the useful or the utilitarian in education has probably been due to the association of the useful with the selfish or mercenary. Now, the nineteenth century gradually developed a new conception of the useful as the serviceable, to one's self through others, and to others through one's self. This new conception of the useful ought to modify profoundly the whole course of education, in its materials, methods, and results. Humanism and idealism eternally contented against animalism and selfishness and seek perfection. On the way to idealism, altruism needs to be cultivated in children to offset their natural egotism, so that it shall be no longer contentions with selfishness. In this view, the more productive the labor of children can be made whether at home or at school, the better for the children. Any employment for children which enable them to produce something wanted by others affords training in useful work both at home and at school: and the part of the school in this training should be planned with the utmost care, from the earliest school-days." The question might arise in a practical mind whether there would not be some danger of harm to the child, through its employer's possible selfishness, in the proposition that "the more productive the labor of children can be made, whether at home or at school, the better for the children."

ALTRUISM IN EDUCATION.

President Eliot goes on to say:

Items of Interest.

"It is a sweet thought—the thought of purgatory," says the Catholic Union and Times. "It is the only thought that can rob death of its sting and sin of its victory. The true Christian soul would not, if it could, remove the realm of purification that lies as a barrier between heaven and the travel-stained wanderers from earth. Could sin, however slight, survive death and accompany the soul into God's eternal presence, then sin's victory would be complete, and the crowns and reward of evil would be assured. But where sin that is mere defect, but no revolt, to be visited with eternal and irremediable doom, then the kingdom of justice and the queenship of mercy would cease to rule over fallen man. The plea of purification where the faithful departed expiate their faults and prepare themselves for God's presence, is therefore a necessary institution in the Divine economy. It is a place of justice and of right to be blessed and beloved of the Christian soul."

Under the above heading the Catholic Telegraph says: "Unic labor has no worse enemies than its own corrupt officers. The principles of unionism are undoubtedly correct, and when they are judiciously applied, always result in good. But the harm comes when designing and unscrupulous men work themselves into the controlling offices, and use their positions to enrich themselves by blackmail. The case of Samuel Parks, ex-walking delegate of the House, Smiths and Bridgemen's Union, of New York, illustrates our meaning. Parks went about assessing fines from $100 to 5,000 upon employers under threats of declaring strikes. He pushed his blackmail too far, and now he is in Sing Sing."

The opinion of the Denver Catholic on the present strike of coal miners in Colorado is as follows: "The miners in the State are not on a strike because they have any grievances of their own that they are seeking to remedy. They are satisfied with the wages they are receiving; they are finding no fault with the conditions under which they are laboring. Left to themselves, the miners today would not be on a strike. It is irresponsible power that produced the present condition. The strike is not an expression of protest on the part of the coal miners of the State. Where not intimidated by outsiders the expression of the great majority would be in favor of resuming work."

The Civil Tribunal has, writes a Paris correspondent, gives a very wise decision in a case between the Little Sisters of the Poor and the Assistance Publique. A testatrix had left a sum of money to the Little Sisters of the Poor for helping the old men and women in their charge. The Poor Law Administration claimed the legacy on the ground that the nuns were debarred by a law of 1825 from accepting any but personal legacies. The Court decided, as they were bound to do by the law of 1825, that the legacy to the Little Sisters of the Poor was void, and they made a declaration to the effect that it vested in the Poor Law Administration, but that the latter must pay the income to the Little Sisters of the Poor, to be used by them for the benefit of the old men and women under their charge.

Speaking of the likelihood of the early elevation of Very Rev. David Fleming, O. F. M., to the Cardinalate, the Rome correspondent of the "London Catholic Times" says: "His position in the Biblical Commission, the suggestion for the institution of which Leo XIII. received, I believe, from him, will delay this, but quod differ non aufertur is a very strong rule in the matter of the Cardinalate. And the short delay is likely to be very much shortened by the fact that, in defiance of precedent, his order, which is one of the great monastic bodies has been for years unrepresented in the Sacred College, where the Capuchin robe is worn by Cardinal Versey, Titular, the Conventual by Cardinal Netto, the Augustinian by Cardinal Ma Inelli and the Benedictine by Cardinal Clesia. The Society of Jesus had even two representatives until the death of Cardinal Messala, and the Augustinian until the death of Cardinal Casca. The Order of Preachers has had of late years

Cardinals Zigliara and Basso, and now it has Cardinal Pioroni, Father David's place in the order, which was about to elect him minister general when the Delegate Apostolic at the chapter interfered, in such a way as to make certain his selections when the idea of creating a Franciscan Cardinal will be entertained. Father David continues to reside at Sant Antonio until an apartment is ready for him at the Vatican.

By going to Mass on Sunday during their recent visit to Paris the King and Queen of Italy greatly shocked and disgusted the Church-prosecuting gentlemen of the French Government, as the corresponding of the "Dublin Freeman" thus notes: "The great fact that stands out from the saturnal, which lasted from Wednesday, October 14, to Sunday, October 18, is that the King and Queen of Italy gave the 'bloot' and the anti-clericals a tremendous knock on the head by going to Mass on Sunday morning. In Catholic Ireland it is taken as a matter of course that people, rich and poor, brought up in the faith should go to Mass on Sundays. Here (in Paris) it is different. The government had made no preparations whatever for the attendance of the King and Queen at a place of worship, whereas the official programme of the King of England (when in France some weeks ago) comprised a visit to the royal place of worship near the British Embassy. All the people at the Foreign Office seem to have been surprised because the (Italian) sovereigns wanted to drive out soon after 6 on Sunday morning. There were no troops available for their protection, so the bicycling policemen had to be utilized for this purpose. Thus the King and Queen went to Mass, and not to any fashionable church, but to a little Italian chapel, that of St. Anthony of Padua, where they were received by the priest in charge, Father Moccoe, and the Chevalier L. Lami."

While the French Ministers of War and Marine are endeavoring at the inauguration of M. Combes if not to abolish army and navy chaplains, at least to reduce them to the lowest quantity, the German Emperor, in conjunction with the Sovereign Pontiff, has nominated a new "Archiebischof," or "Field-probst" for the forces of the Far-land. The new chaplain general of the German army is Vicar General Gollmar, who succeeds the late Mgr. Aumann. The seat of this military Bishop is at Berlin. M. Villmar took the episcopal oath on October 22 before the Apostolic Legate at Munich and all the Prussian and Bavarian prelates.

During the recent papal consistory the sister of the Pope sat in the box set aside for the family of the Pontiff. They were dressed entirely in black, with black veils, according to etiquette. They seemed quite overcome at seeing their brother in the midst of such pomp and adulation and several times were seen to wipe away tears. One of the sisters said after the ceremony: "To see how the Pope is loved repays me for the sacrifice of not living with him any more."

After an audience on October 28 the Pope conferred upon Colonel O'Reilly, Deputy Mayor of Cape Town, the honor of a Knighthood of St. Gregory. His Holiness sent his Apostolic Benediction to the wife of South Africa.

The Holy Father, hearing that Cardinal Moran, of Sydney, Australia, was taking home with him from Rome some articles for the St. Mary's Cathedral bazaar at Sydney, sent the Cardinal a magisterial order, accompanied by a most kind message saying also that he had ordered a large oil portrait of himself for the same bazaar.

A St. Petersburg journal asserts that "to work at a trade seems to the Slavians unworthy of a free man." Can it be possible that the young men we see hanging around corners in our cities are all Slavians?

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"I suffered dreadfully from rheumatism, but have been completely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, for which I am deeply grateful." Miss FRANCES SMITH, Prescott, Ont.

"I had an attack of the grip which left me weak and helpless and suffering from rheumatism. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and this medicine has entirely cured me. I have no hesitation in saying it saved my life." M. J. McDONALD, Trenton, Ont.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Removes the cause of rheumatism—no outward application can. Take it.
