Spring Cleaning

All peace and all pleasures are banished, Abroad now I gladly would roam. My quiet and comforts have vanished; "A desolate wreck is my home! The painters are all in possession, The charwomen come by the score : The whitewashers troop in procession, And bespatter from ceiling to floor, I own I must make a confe Spring cleaning's a terrible bore !

They come in the morning at daybreak. Just when I'm forgetting my cares. And into my slumbers how they break, With bustle and tramp on the stairs! They laugh and they whistle and chatter, They paint and they varnish and size ; They thump and they wrangle and clatter, And drive away sleep from my eyes, They make me as mad as a hatter. They cause me at daybreak to rise.

I dare not complain, notwishstanding-I'm faint with the fumes of white lead : And tripover pails on the landing. And paint pots fall down on my head ! When right through the hall I go stumbling I'm sick, and I'm sorry and sore ; O'er planks and o'er ladders I'm tambling, ad get my greatcoat painted o'er
