Everybody Wants Profits

IT isn't the amount of the premium but the amount of the dividend that fixes the cost of an insurance policy.

This is particularly true in a Mutual company where all surplus earnings are credited solely to policyholders.

The profits may be drawn in cash, used to reduce the premiums or to increase the amount of the insurance.

Less expensive policies are issued without profits, but in a prosperous company such as the Mutual of Canada the policies with profits soon become the cheaper.

One could not do a wiser thing than take out a life, limited payment life, or endowment policy in the Mutual of Canada, for it is among the most liberal dividend payers in America.

For example: twenty years ago a young man, age 25, took out a policy for $4,000.00 on the 20-year endowment plan. He paid a single premium of $2,036. Last month the Company paid him $5,374.65. This was a return of $263.95 for each $100 invested in addition to the protection of $4,000 for 20 years.

WEEK-END NOTES.

(I. C. M.)

Reason alone could not answer the questions which such a spot, and such a scene suggest, nor could any human logic explain how it all occurred. Yonder lay a chain of beautiful lakes, which dotted the landscape like so many sheets of crystal, and which, under the rays of the sunset, scintillated and danced in panoramic order like molten silver. We counted the lakes and totaled them at twenty-one—great and small. Beneath us lay the homesteads of Holyrood, and the track and the station, and a passing train, all looking like some little toys with which the children play on Christmas morning. Beyond these we beheld the church, where kneel the people at the hour of prayer, and where broken hearts go for consolation. Here and there a few people passed, but all seemed small, and all looked insignificant. As we looked we remembered the words of the prophet when he spoke of the inhabitants of the earth as grasshoppers.

These sights and scenes far transcended our little selves; but there was still a grander scene beyond us. There was the bay with all its arms and coves, its headlands and its beaches; there was the sea so full of mystery, and so laden with tragedy. Just then it was placid, but in imagination we saw it angry, and seemed to hear its roar. The sea, and the hills, and the sunshine, and the mountain height upon which our company stood, were all telling one tale, and each imparting one lesson. It was the tale of the Seasons in their turn, of Nature in its glory, of Time in its march, and of Eternity in its duration. There was not any voice, yet a thousand convictions spoke to us; there was not any motion, but all nature was active, and the immensity of time being, we seemed to have realized that higher and truer interpretation of life which was meant for the children of men, and which is in store for them. The dust and cobwebs of the ages have some day to be blown away, and men will see the world in a better light, and the beauty and the grandeur of creation will be more closely studied and more fully appreciated. Then will men rise from their own failures to the attainment of their ideals; and finally from their smaller selves to their larger possibilities. The destiny of mankind lies in this direction, and when the right moment dawns this destiny will be reached. All teaching of faith leads to this; and when faith, and nature, and men harmonize, then there will be one head, supreme and great, and that head God.

Rann-dom Reels

THE SERMON.

The sermon is a long, aggressive missile which is aimed at the heads of people who are not present in the congregation.

The habit of sermonizing was brought to this country from England in the Mayflower, along with a new brand of conscience and some antique furniture which is still on sale. The most deadly and uninterrupted form of sermon ever perpetrated upon the American people sprang up in the Thirteen colonies, and lasted as long as the hour glass could stand it. It must have been a terrifying sight to a thirteen year old Pilgrim Father to watch the hour glass at the morning service and count the number of times it was turned end for end, while the minister delivered a sermon with the smooth, gliding motion of a Corliss engine. In those days the sermon which started at 9 a.m. and was finished before three o'clock in the p.m. of the same day was considered a total failure, and a still hunt for a new preacher was immediately instituted.

The modern sermon does not cover as much ground as the samples which were put out in colonial days, which teaches us that we should know when we have had enough. It is a lamentable fact, however, that a vestryman who will begin to yawn like an army tent after the home pastor has preached for twenty-two minutes will sit in a saw-dust tabernacle on a seat without any back for two hours and a half, while some evangelist rips up the community from teflocks to collar button, and never notice the flight of time or size of the crick in his back. Most people would rather listen to a super-heated evangelist raise blisters on the hides of the members of the church than attend the evening sermon which lasts fifteen minutes and then runs into a series of moving pictures.

The missionary sermon is an effort which secures better results when nobody knows it is coming. It has a sublime mission, which is to extract money from people who would rather spend it for new non-skid tires. It requires courage to preach one of these sermons, but probably no more than is required to live on the average pastor's salary.

Girls! Girls! Try It! Stop Dandruff and Beautify Your Hair

Hair stops falling out and gets thick, wavy, strong and beautiful.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Dandeline" hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Dandeline and carefully draw through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This cleanses the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once, Dandeline dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Dandeline from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

The British in Bagdad.

Every addition to the military news of 1917 explains more and more fully why Germany made her peace offer and her attack by submarines on the neutral world, for the two were parts of one movement. She knew that she was coming to the end of her tether, and to stave off the day of wrath she made a wild attempt to stop the war before it came. The Allies knew it as well as she did, and refused her plea. That falling, she sought by destroying England on the sea to save herself before the inevitable blow of the superior military strength of the Allies fell upon her on land.

Flattering to the Original

But Imitations Only Disappoint

There are many imitations of this great treatment for coughs, colds, whooping cough, and influenza. They usually have some sale on the merits of the original, but it should be remembered that they are like it in name only.

This is a facsimile of the package bearing portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D.

"manshan on the Persian front." The "military reasons" were that only precipitate flight could save the Mesopotamian army from capture, and that its flight placed the Persian army in the same danger. All that Enver could offer on the other hand was that the situation on the Sinal front was "unchanged," for his talk about the Dardanelles being "safe" was utterly meaningless, since no attack is being made there. It was all a frantic clutching after any straw of comfort, however broken, and must have made a chilling impression on the Parliament.

The Bagdad dream was the thing on which Germany really counted when she made her desperate plea for peace, peace to be dickered for in secret round a council table at which the shrewdest bargainer would come out best. Germany's Eastern empire made secure at the cost of the surrender of Belgium and Northern France, that was the core of it. When the Allies insisted on naming their own peace terms in the open, the hope of Talleyranding a new Congress of Vienna glimmered away. General Maude in Bagdad takes from Germany the basis for her dickered, the thing on which she had hoped to even-ouch and come out winner even though the game in the west went against her.—N.Y. ### Weakened by Anaemia Doctors Gave No Hope

Said She Was Threatened With Consumption, and Gave Her Three Weeks To Live.

Anaemia is indicated by thin, watery blood. The gums and eyelids grow pale, there is great weakness and fatigue and digestion fails. Since Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood, it is naturally most suitable as a treatment for anaemia. This letter proves its efficiency in the most severe cases.

Mrs. J. Adams, Port Hope, Ont., writes: "About six years ago I was taken with very weak spells, and though I doctored with the family physician and used other medicines for two years, I got very little relief, and, in fact, continued to grow weaker. I was so weak I could not wait on myself or raise my hand to my head, and decided to go to my daughter in Toronto. When examined by Toronto doctors they pronounced me to be in a dangerous condition, threatened with consumption and other ailments, and said I would not live for three weeks. One day I was looking through Dr. Chase's Almanac and read about the cure of anaemia by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I began the use of this treatment at once and am now well on the way back to health, after having used the Nerve Food for six months. I want my friends to know that my cure was effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food alone and after my discouragement from the use of other treatments. I feel it my duty to let everybody know about this remarkable cure."

As a restorative for persons who are pale, weak and run down there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Gradually and naturally the red corpuscles are increased in the blood, the color is restored to the cheeks and the strength comes back to wasted nerves and muscles.
