NEW, NEAT, SATISFACING—The "Tubby" collar and skirt set, in the center, is made of ruffled linen, worked in a design in old blue or Indian blue, while the "Tubby" collar that sets up high at the neck and slopes sharply to a V-shape in front, where the bow and jabot are attached, is of handkerchief linen. The "Tubby" stock, at the right, is obviously designed for the woman whose neck is long and slender, and who wishes to draw attention to the face. It is made of a double ruffling of chiffon or batiste is sewed on the top and lower edges, and a half around to finish at the center front, where the end is drawn through a buckle with a loop and two ends. A jabot of the same material as the ruffles is three inches wide and made with a wide dark colored worsted dress that will soon replace the linen for street wear, there is nothing that adds a more telling touch than collar and sleeve bands or cuffs of the nature of these modern made out of the beautiful colored embroideries that hint of the Orient.

The "Travellers' Aid Women"

Have you ever noticed at the Calgary station as you hurried to catch a train, or went to meet some friend, a woman garbed in the gray or blue dress of a deaconess and wearing a silver badge? Perhaps you've been too busy to notice the letters on the badge or watch the movements of these quietly dressed women?

There is so much in this swiftly progressing city of ours that we miss.

But the ever-present woman in the deaconess dress? Forget your hurry and watch her for a few moments.

Over in the corner of the waiting room is a woman with several children, a small one in her arms and two hanging onto her skirts. The children are fretful—as children travelling usually are. They have tear-stained, grimy faces, because the train, and days on the train, are not conducive to cleanliness or child happiness. The mother is tired too and her eyes have the burning look of tears kept back.

The woman in the gray garb sees in one glance the situation. These women have such a width of comprehension. She goes over and speaks to the mother—soon she gets some milk for the children—she brings more food. She tells the mother where to go. Indeed she does all the little helpful acts that make the way of the travelling mother easier.

She is always present day and night and meets all trains. Sometimes it is the girl from the country, with bewildered, dazed look, wondering why she ever left home; who is directed to a boarding house.

Sometimes she secures positions for the women who have drifted to the city hearing there were better chances for a girl in the West, in the great struggle for existence.

But who are these women with badges? They belong to the Travellers' Aid and they are engaged by the W.C.T.U. and the Y.W.C.A. Those letters are engraved on the badge. In Calgary there are two, one who is on duty in the day time, the other at night. The "Y" board gives them a home at the Y.W.C.A. and the W.C.T.U. workers by canvassing from house to house or soliciting subscriptions from members, pay their salaries. Anybody who is interested in such a work may contribute toward it.

These women, by the sum total of the hundred kindnesses they do each day, belong to the "truly great" type. And in such a city as Calgary, where hundreds of newcomers are arriving daily, their field of work is immense, so immense that it needs the help and support of every Calgary woman.

Coming Events

The Azo Club.

The Azo Club will meet this afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. J. Young, 524 Fifteenth Avenue West.

GOING TO HEADQUARTERS

They tell a story of a lawyer and a railroad man who went to the theatre together. The railroad man saw a freshly dressed red-faced portly looking man sitting in one of the boxes. This man was the no-account cousin of the lawyer, but the railroad man didn't know it.

"Who is the tough person sitting in that box?" the railroad man asked pleasantly. "He looks like a drunken burglar," said the attorney, "is my cousin."

The railroad man passed a couple of times but soon got a grip on himself and remarked genially: "Well, I was ought to be in your headquarters for information, didn't I?"

Going to headquarters for information is not always so embarrassing. For instance, if you want information on how to procure a better home, an apartment more to your liking or a new stenographer, a book-keeper or a cook, the best headquarters for information is in the Want Ad Column.

"TOMORROW" READ AT PAGET HALL TONIGHT

Mnde, Labadie, Under the Auspices of Anti-Tubercular Society, is Here

Mme. Hamlet Labadie, who will give a dramatic interpretation of the play "Tomorrow" at Paget Hall this evening, under the auspices of the Anti-Tubercular Society, is an artist of a type and quality so rare that it is not possible to convey to those who have not heard her an adequate conception of what she does and how she does it.

In review of her work, one critic writes in part: It is probable that no one has ever before attempted to give the same sort of dramatic portrayal as is so successfully done by Mme. Labadie. It is the presentation or unfolding of a drama in the highest form. It goes straight to the intellect. There is no illusion, delusion, or other extraneous matter between the intellect and the author's creation. Madame Labadie projects the characters mentally.

Madame Labadie is a producer of plays, but instead of employing what we call "actors" to represent the various characters, she creates them in her mind, so that they can be clearly visualized by the mind's eye of the audience. This having been done perfectly by a power of genius which is difficult to describe, she then, in her capacity as stage director of these characters, requires them to say and do the things the author of the drama has written for them.

She represents the author, who, as he writes the play, must have his characters well defined in his mind, making them talk and act mentally for himself, just as Madame Labadie makes them talk and act for the whole audience. She plays to the intellect, not the physical senses.

Instead of seeing the thing with the physical eye, the artist's eye sees it with the mind's eye, and great as it is, it is the one case as the other. It is a rare art. Perhaps in years to come there may be more such artists, and plays may be thus presented to intellectual people all over the country. Tickets are on sale at Osborne's. Everybody is requested to be in their seats at 8.15.

SPLENDID ISOLATION OF JAPANESE EMPEROR

To His People He is the Connecting Link Between God and Man

Millions of His Subjects Bow at the Mere Mention of His Name

Yoshihito, a youth of 22, has lately succeeded to the imperial throne of Japan. He is a royal magnificence that visits itself upon no other monarch of the earth. Oriental splendor, pomp and ceremony in their very essence, are his. He is the connecting link between God and man. He is the embodiment of the spirit of Japan. His subjects adore him. He is a sacrifice among the Japanese. He must be referred to as the emperor. When the title is printed capital letters must be used, as must the pronouns referring to him.

"Descended From the Gods" Not even the greatest among his subjects dare to address him. In his presence the greatest must lower their eyes. He may be addressed only by his members of the imperial household. He is a sacrifice among the Japanese. He must be referred to as the emperor. When the title is printed capital letters must be used, as must the pronouns referring to him.

The question of whether he is personally popular or not is a matter of little consequence. He is the 123rd sovereign of his line, tracing the royal descent back to 600 years before the time of Christ. As emperor he is interested in the intensest idealism and mysticism of his people.

But there is another side to the picture. The modern spirit that made it impossible for him to rule as a monarch, has been in the mind of the emperor since he was a young man, with many associations, working at school without favor or special consideration. He wedded a young woman, who was a daughter of a European family, particularly tennis.

His Sacrifice

Now, at 22, in the prime of his youth, he must give up these things in a large measure, and sacrifice himself to the splendid isolation and the pomp and ceremony of his position. He is a sacrifice among the Japanese. He must be referred to as the emperor. When the title is printed capital letters must be used, as must the pronouns referring to him.

In his superficial moods the world has been inclined to look upon all rulers as tyrants. But the emperor of Japan is a different matter. He is a sacrifice among the Japanese. He must be referred to as the emperor. When the title is printed capital letters must be used, as must the pronouns referring to him.

THE LEMON AS A MEDICINE

(From the New York Times)

A nervous headache may frequently be cured by several slices of lemon in a cup of strong tea, and a bilious headache is almost invariably put to rest by a tablespoonful of lemon juice in a cup of hot water. The juice of half a lemon in a cup of hot water, first thing in the morning is an excellent corrective of indigestion and a stimulant for calomel and similar drugs.

Money, alum and lemon juice is an old-fashioned but good remedy for hemorrhoids. A dash of lemon juice in water makes a pleasant and effective tooth wash, clearing the teeth and sweetening the breath. In fact, a lemon is a most useful household article. Outwardly applied, lemon juice and rosewater will remove sunburn and white spots from the face. Inwardly, lemon juice on lump sugar is fine for hoarseness.

Lemon juice with olive oil is far superior as a salad dressing to vinegar and a tablespoonful of lemon juice adds a delicate flavor and whiteness to the boiling rice or eggs. Salt and lemon juice make a most effective skin cleanser, and a mixture of lemon juice and sugar is a fine for hoarseness.
