A feature entirely new in connection Leslie Burk Found Not Guilty on Charge of Arson at Cobourg.

Cobourg, June 19.-After deliberat-and the following programme of events six days, and a great deal of evidence was taken.

In charging the jury, Judge Benson this afternoon spoke of the case as a very unusual one, as there was no direct evidence given beyond that of the prisoner's own statement. All the evidence was circumstantial, and the chief contention of the crown was that the prisoner committed the alleged crime through a desire for notorlety. This the judge pointed out, seemed improbable. The boy's previous history was good, and there had never been an incident in his career to lead one to believe that he would commit arson either for notorlety or for revenge.

career to lead one to believe that he would commit arson either for notor-lety or for revenge.

Judge Benson criticized the methods of County Constable Smith, of Colborne, Constable Jarvis and Inspector Miller, employed in connection with the prosecution of the prisoner. He criticized Smith for arrosing Burk as a vagrant; Jarvis for resting Burk as a vagrant; Jarvis for suggesting to the prisoner a story more probable than the one he was telling, and Miller for the manner in which he sought to get from Burk a confession before the trial.
