After-Supper Talks

With Cynthia Grey
THE ADVANTAGES OF SAVING.

Saving money to be worth while, both in acquiring a good habit and also in material result, must be systematic. We must not say, "I will put dollars away when I please, or when I have no particular use for it." That will never, or at least very rarely, come. The only right way to save is to lay by a certain sum weekly or monthly, according to one's salary. Pay day is the time to put it away. We should have a fund marked "Saving." One is surprised to see how rapidly such a sum grows by systematic additions.

THE VALUE OF SAVING.

In order to save in a systematic way, it is necessary to plan one's money. No wage-earner should be without an account book in which to record his receipts and expenses. If we once form the habit of planning our money, we will be surprised to see how much further it will go. Wonders may be accomplished by planning. Probably most of us will not save, or figure as closely as did Whittier in the poverty of his youth. He reckoned his expenses so closely and planned his money so carefully that he calculated to have twenty-five cents left at the end of the year—and he had it. We must have a purpose in view in saving. We should plan to invest our money in some way where we have a sure large enough. We must be aware of fine sounding schemes whereby we may lose our hard-earned money, but we should have in mind some safe investment in real estate, or bonds and mortgages. There is always more or less trouble and expense attached to holding any sort of real estate. There is none connected with holding a mortgage. A guaranteed first mortgage is a thoroughly safe investment. We are sure of our five per cent interest in city property and usually six per cent in out of town.

The Famous Novel by

"Feelin' the truth of that, I've never married," Mr. John, I do say I never, and don't have to listen to a parcel of opinion. But I was going to say, what's to hinder me from taking that boy to my home? There are no cat-calls petticoats hanging up in my closets. "And no closets to hang 'em in, I'll be bound!" rejoined Crenshaw. "But if you'll take the boy, Bob, you shan't lose by it. Yancy reared a big knotted hand on the boy's shoulder. "Come wake up, sonny! You Uncle Bob is ready to strike out home!" The child roused with a start and stared into the strange bearded face that was bent toward him. "It's you, Uncle Bob," he cried. "Are you the little neevy what will help him to hook up that old blind mule of him?" Here, give us the aping rite to tell." "Please, Mr. where is Aunt Alesia?" asked the child. "Yancy balanced the rifle on his great palm and his eyes assumed a speculative cast. "I wonder what's to hinder us from leading this old gun, and firing it at the gun, and hearing this old gun go bang-bang!" The child's blue eyes grew wide. "Like the guns go off in the woods?" he asked, in a breathless whisper. "Like the guns a body hears off in the woods, only louder—beeper louder," said Yancy. "You fetch out his plander, Mr. John," he added in a lower tone. "Do it now, please," the child cried, slipping off the bench. "I was expectin' to hear you name me Uncle Bob, sonny, my little neevy."

"I reckon you're right, Mr. John; the old general used to spend a heap on the barony, and we all know he never got a cent back, so I reckon the money's the same yet."

"Haden got an answer from them South Carolina Quintards, and they don't know nothing about the money," Crenshaw, changing the subject. "So you can rest easy, Bob; they ain't going to want him."

"Well, sir, that surely is a parcel of comfort to me, I find I got the instiguit of a father without having had none of the instincts of a husband."

A richer, deeper realization of his joy came to Yancy when he had turned his back on Balaam's Cross Roads and set out for home through the fragrant silence of the pine woods. His probable part in the young man's life was placed in his keeping. He was a glorious thing to the man. He had not cared to speculate on the future, he had believed that friends or kindred must sooner or later claim him. COOKERY BY PAPER BAGS

IS POPULAR IN THE WEST

Miss Isabel Armstrong has the following on the women's page of the Regina Leader:

Appropos paper bag cookery, a young man who has taken several rounds of courses of lectures in domestic science and is quite famous for her skill in the culinary art in the Western Ontario town in which she lives, wrote as follows this week to her sister in Regina, one of the season's brides, who is naturally looking for house-keeping suggestions. "Have you people in the west and some kind of heart of the paper bag cookery that is creating quite a stir here? The bags are obtainable only from the Mail and Empire, and The London Advertiser so far. An inclosing coupon and do hope you will send for some. The medium and large bags are the best, and be sure to get the cook book, too. I have baked potatoes, chicken, steak, sausage and tart pie. Yesterday I cooked two pies, one pie in the bag, and the other in the usual way, and there was no comparison one cupful of rich cream. This is necessary in order to give a texture of proper consistency. Flavor to taste and place on ice before using.

CHRONIC BORROWING

[By M. E. G.]

I was foraging in Aunt Martha's cupboard. "Why do you keep a little ten in this small can, instead of in the regular coffee?" asked.

Aunt Martha laughed. "There's a tale, Miss Z. I'll tell you. I was foraging in Aunt Martha's cupboard. "Why do you keep a little ten in this small can, instead of in the regular coffee?" asked.

between them. The one in the bag put up so you would never dream both pies were made from the same pastry. Of course, I put the pie in a pie pan, and the other in a pie pan. The other things are just put in the bag and laid on the grate of the oven, which must be good and hot. Our neighbor, Mrs. K., goes on to say, "I am quite as enthusiastic as I am."

Paper bag cookery has been heard of in the "wild and woolly" West, and what is more, has been tested and found entirely satisfactory by an expert in Domestic Science. The specially prepared paper bags will be on sale at the Leader, the only place in the city where they can be obtained. They will be on hand after Tuesday or Wednesday of next week. Only a limited number have been ordered for the first shipment and those who wish to try them without delay should order at once by calling at the office, or by mail. All orders must be accompanied by a coupon clipped from the Leader, and the other in the usual way, and there was no comparison
