

LORD ROBERTS AS INSURGENT

Veteran General Joins Lord Halsbury's Faction in Fight Against Veto Bill—Sees It as Path of Duty

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The veto bill, shorn of the vital amendments of the House of Lords, but with some minor concessions added to it, will be presented to the House of Commons tomorrow, and as many peers who wish to take part in the debate that a vote is unlikely before Thursday.

The insurgents have obtained an influential recruit in Lord Roberts, who has announced his intention to vote with the followers of the Earl of Halsbury against the measure. Lord Roberts contends that in politics, as in war, the path of duty also is the path of safety.

The Unionist newspapers tomorrow will comment keenly on two incidents of today's debate on the bill. The first is Home Secretary Churchill's announcement that he will not attempt to pass the Irish Home Rule Bill during the present parliament, a fact which, though generally understood, had not before been so frankly stated; and secondly, the admission of the Earl of Crewe, in the House of Lords, that the ministers were not of one mind regarding the creation of peers. The Earl described the proposed course as personally odious to him, but at the same time gave the Lords a warning that if such a course were forced upon the government, there would be no limited creation of peers.

More Noisy Debate.

There was a crowded House when the debate, which was interrupted by several scenes on July 24, was resumed on a motion for consideration of the Lords' amendments to the bill. Premier Asquith was absent today, as an attack of rheumatism prevented his attending to the speech on Mr. Balfour's motion to censure the government. Sir Edward Grey, the foreign secretary, led the government's case.

Lord Hugh Cecil, Unionist, did his best to start a repetition of the former uproar, but the opposition did not follow his lead. He moved that consideration of the bill be postponed for three months, and in his remarks said that the prime minister ought to be subjected to criminal law for high treason.

This remark aroused a noisy protest from the ministerial benches, and Speaker Lowther quelled the incipient disorder. The motion was rejected, 348 to 209, and a motion to begin consideration of the Lords' amendment was agreed to.

Sir Edward Carson, Unionist, devoted himself today to Home Rule and promised the government that the intention of passing Home Rule by force would be resisted by force. The Home Rule contest would be settled by Balfour, and not by Westminster, he said.

As a point, Sir Edward nearly caused an outbreak by referring to Mr. Asquith's communication to Mr. Balfour on the subject of King's guarantee as "a blackmailing letter."

The ministerialists were on their feet in an instant, howling defiance and demanding that the words be withdrawn. The speaker, however, ruled that although Sir Edward had sallied near the wind, the words were not unpatriotic.

Home Secretary Churchill followed, strongly deprecating the use of disorder and riot, advocated by Lord Hugh Cecil and Sir E. Carson, saying: "There are 70,000 dockers on strike at this moment in London. Some of them are suffering from lack of food, and it would be the first to ask that soldiers should be sent to the scene."

Mr. Churchill also stated that when the ministers conferred with the King in regard to the guarantee, he was made fully acquainted with all matters in dispute between the parties, "among which Home Rule was one of the most important."

The impression which the speaker evidently sought to convey was that the King was in favor of Home Rule for Ireland.

The home secretary announced the other concessions which the government was prepared to make. They had concluded that in order to lighten the burden of the speaker in deciding the character of bills, and to determine if they were purely financial measures or otherwise, he should consult the chairman of committee on ways and means and public accounts.

An amendment that the speaker in deciding what constitutes a money bill, shall consult two members appointed from the panel of chairmen having been carried, and the Lords' amendment for preventing an extension of the duration of parliament, having been accepted, Mr. Churchill moved to disagree with Lord Lansdowne's amendment excluding home rule from the scope of the bill.

Rodolphe Lemieux at St. Hyacinthe on Sunday afternoon. If the postmaster-general turns up as he is advertised to do the result is expected to produce one of the liveliest political meetings that have been held in the province for years past.

During the campaign that has been waged for the past two months, a great deal of cross-firing has taken place from different meetings between the members of the government and the opposition. Mr. Bourassa declined to answer the charges except face to face with Mr. Lemieux, therefore the postmaster-general was invited to amend the programme of meetings at St. Hyacinthe and elsewhere. The invitations were ignored by Mr. Lemieux himself, but Mr. Bourassa, late member for St. Hyacinthe has convened a meeting of electors at St. Hyacinthe for Sunday and invited Mr. Bourassa to meet him on the platform there. Mr. Bourassa made no reply to the invitation until today, when it was announced that Hon. Mr. Lemieux would be one of the speakers at the Beauport meeting.

"L'Événement" accordingly this afternoon, announces that Mr. Bourassa would be pleased to meet Mr. Lemieux at St. Hyacinthe.

SANTA ROSA WRECK
Witnesses Testify that Steamer was Steered Dangerously Near Shore at Point Arguello

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 8.—Captain T. C. Titchworth of the tug Dauntless and Captain Louis Nopander, of the steamer Bear testified here today, before United States Steamship Inspector Bolles and Bulger, that Captain O. A. Faria, of the wrecked steamer Santa Rosa, was steering dangerously near the shore just prior to the grounding of the vessel, off the Point Arguello lighthouse.

"If the vessel had been a stranger to me, I should have warned her by wireless," said Captain Nopander. "I could have predicted that, following the course she was on, she would go ashore inside Point Arguello."

Captain Titchworth's testimony agreed with that of Captain Nopander, in all essential points. Today's proceedings were preliminary to the trial of Captain Faria and Third Mate Thomas of the Santa Rosa, which will be begun in a few days.
