An angel shouteth to the earth, Glad tidings-truths of sacred worth Peasant and princes confess his sway, His lightnings chase the clouds aways Of eighteen hundard years!

He sits upon his throne, the PRESS, To lift the fallen, and to bless The lowly and the blind; He bringeth from his home above Peace, Frindship, Charity, and Love,

The citadels by Bondage built, The wrongs piled up by Craft and Guilt By Avarice and Last,
Before the splendors of his bow, Their pestilential horrors bow, And erumble into dust.

offis name is KNOWLEDGE and he flings. The light of heaven from his wings, To beautify the soul! Virtue and Freedon, hand in hand, Head this mighty angel stand,
And march from pole to pole
