

The Last Chance for Ireland Perhaps.

At length there is a hope that inter-nocine strife in Ireland may be stopped. One more chance is given the warring parties.

To the wise and patriotic counsel of the Archbishop of Toronto this salutary expedition is due. It is a most timely and opportune one.

In due course, then, we may confidently assume the gathering will take place. It will be a unique event. Of all the strange and impressive national events ever held on the world's wide stage, this exile pilgrimage from the remotest seas to the shores of the motherland will be the most striking.

freedom instead of her own hated symbol of oppression. This is what the Irish race convention will declare and signify to the world. It is a great trust with which the delegates will be charged, and we need not impress upon the Irish people that here has essential it is they take all means in their power to have it confined to the very ablest hands.
