

And so we leave this work, to which we have devoted our last few days in Ontario, in the hands of Him for whose truth and glory it has been done. May he accept it, although so little fitted to serve so high a purpose. May the Lord forgive His servant, if, in the desire to tear the veil from the divine features of sacred truth, he has used to ungentle a hand, or has, in the smallest thing, wronged one of the Lord's loved ones. And may He use it as He please, in some small way.
