SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 25.

IF WE WERE ALL DEAD!

The Telegram, having shown to its own satisfaction, that it had made certain statements which nobody took the trouble to contradict, now believes that these statements should be accepted as matters of fact. Editorially it declares that the public "cannot be put off with bluster and equivocation." Yet it pursues this means of trying to build up a case which has no other foundation. To charge a man with a crime and then abuse him for not proving his innocence may appear to The Telegram as a reasonable course, but not to anyone else. No responsible person would press such absurd charges as The Telegram is trying to maintain after the explanations that have been given.

Mayor Hocken's name and Mr. W. F. Maclean's name were inserted in a prospectus without their consent. Both gentlemen have stated that the use of their names was unauthorized. Every one believes this. The Telegram. The Telegram thinks the matter should be taken into the courts! To what end? If everybody carried into the courts the silly charges The Telegram makes all the year round it might please The Telegram's conceit, but people are not so soft as that. Contradiction after contradiction of The Telegram's statements has been made. The Telegram publishes the contradictions in one column, and in another repeats its false assertions. And then it expects the public to give serious attention to such rubbish.

All this bluster and equivocation on the part of The Telegram is of course intended to distract attention from the issue first raised, which was the complexity of The Telegram in opposition to all east end improvements, and its co-operation in all west end movements for development. The Telegram is trying to convince east end people that it is friendly to their interests. But it does not tell them that it has always opposed anything that would benefit the east end. It opposed the Bloor street viaduct for ten years. It has opposed all annexations in that direction. It opposed railway building in that district. It looks on the east end of Toronto as the home of land sharks and the natural habitat of all who escape the tender mercies of Governor Chambers. It is necessary to use the language of hyperbole in dealing with The Telegram, but we are not conveying an incorrect impression. And now it is trying to convince east enders that it is acting in the friendliest spirit, while it warns the people of Toronto that if they have anything to do with the people of Toronto they will be robbed.

In order to make all this plausible it invents stories about Mayor Hocken or anyone else who may be dragged into its scheme of attack, and if the inventions are not disproved it calls upon its readers to contemplate the guilt it has exposed. These methods are worthy of the Arkansas Traveler, or perhaps The Parkdale Sun, which we observe The Telegram regards as an authority, but they will have little influence in Toronto. If the proprietor of The Telegram, and of The World, and Mayor Hocken and all the people concerned in the Tordomron annexation were dead, the question would have to be decided just the same, and it would have to be decided upon its merits. Toronto has suffered for years from The Telegram system of trying to settle all public questions on a basis of personal antipathies or preferences. It may do in a village, but it won't do in a city of half a million.

If its hunger for the truth be as great and unappeasable as it professes, The Telegram had better ruminate on these considerations for a short time. A little thought might save a lot of shrieking.

THE NEW WAR CLOUD.

What is to all intents and purposes an ultimatum has been addressed by the Austro-Hungarian Government to the Serbian Government, complaining bitterly of machinations against the tranquillity of the dual monarchy, and demanding, in truculent terms, assurances that these will no longer be permitted. Although understood to be taken without the knowledge of its partners in the triple alliance, it is announced that the German Government is prepared to support the position of its ally and if necessary to sustain her by force of arms should a third power intervene between the immediate parties to the quarrel. Mobilization of the Austrian army is in progress. The forces on the frontier have been increased and Germany is also preparing for possible contingencies. Meantime the startled world awaits Serbia's reply to this direct threat of war.

Peace depends not so much on the action of Serbia as on the attitude of Russia, the power behind that holds the keys of the present situation. Austria has called for a show-down and has forced the Russian hand. The result of the Balkan war was a severe blow to Austrian ambitions, since it closed her dream of reaching Salonica. What made the disappointment keener was the evident increase of Russian influence in Serbia. Still even that would not have afforded opportunity or justification for the bolt now launched. Both were given by the recent assassination of the heir to the Austrian throne and his wife, and Austria has lost no time in bringing her quarrel to an issue. The one real question is whether Russia is ready to plunge into a conflict which she has long regarded as inevitable. If she is, then Armageddon—if not, Serbia will have to back down or stand to lose much of the fruit of the recent war. Britain, while deeply concerned, is not necessarily involved, since Sir Edward Grey, not long ago, explicitly declared that no secret or other agreements or obligations existed binding her to enter the field, irrespective of the cause or action.

THE EUROPEAN TROUBLE.

Every civilized country is now concerned in the aftermath of the Balkan wars. While successful in driving the Turk out of the major part of South-eastern Europe, this has brought other difficulties in its train which are not so easily solved by old world methods. For in continental Europe a conflict is in progress that is not only international, but is part of the general revolt against the medieval notions that have prevailed for centuries. It is part of the universal struggle between the forces of modern democracy and the traditions and prejudices of outgrown ages.

Europe is in a period of transition and much of its trouble comes from this internal conflict. Yet, as before, it presents a world epitome. New ideas, yet to be proved, jostle with convictions, based on a past experience, that cannot be correlated with the conditions of the twentieth century. All the difficulties that confront European diplomacy spring from the plain fact that the nations of that continent are in different stages of evolution and they are intensified by the insistence of more advanced individuals that all shall be treated as on the same level of attainment. Hence arises the trouble Sir Edward Grey and all statesmen charged with the conduct of public affairs, find in adjusting the new ideals to older conditions.

ATLANTIC CABLE SERVICE.

At the closing sittings in London of the Dominion Royal Commission evidence was taken with regard to the proposed British Atlantic cable. Among the witnesses examined was Mr. Stanley J. Goddard, the European representative of the Western Union Telegraph Company, who was called to make a statement regarding the proposal to lease an Atlantic cable from his company to link up with the Pacific Cable Company's line from Canada to Australasia, and thus institute an all-British service under British control, thru British territory and uniting Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand. In replying he submitted a statement from the president of the telegraph company to the effect that at the moment he saw no insuperable objection to such a proceeding subject to the company's interest being properly protected. The witness pointed out, however, that it would probably be found necessary to have an alternative cable at command because all cables, particularly those on the Atlantic routes, were liable to interruption.

A cable despatch appearing on Thursday reported that a movement is on foot to enable English-speaking countries to exchange week-end cables at reduced rates, and that most of the countries concerned have already agreed. This is all very well, as far as it goes, but it is plain that neither

WHEAT YIELD LOW IN SASKATCHEWAN

Week of Cool Weather Will Increase Production, Says Langley.

Canadian Press Despatch.
SASKATCHEWAN, July 24.—"We cannot hope taking the province as a whole, that the wheat yield in Saskatchewan will be more than fourteen bushels to the acre," declared Hon. George Langley, minister of municipal affairs, when questioned on the crop outlook. "The weather will still be a considerable factor, as a break in the hot spell and a week or two of cool, dull weather will considerably increase the yield."

"There is every likelihood of an early harvest and the grain sample will probably be a good one. Oats and barley are light, and it is possible that not more than one-half an average crop of these grains will be harvested. Some compensation is likely to be realized, however, in the prices of coarser grain, as the amount for export will undoubtedly be small. The need for harvesters from outside points will, I consider, be very limited, the unemployed men in our towns and being probably quite as good harvesters as any that we could hope to get from the east, and the government is busy itself moving farmers from districts where there is a crop failure to other districts where men will be required."
