MEETS DELANEY
NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—"Bob" Fitzsimmons, son of a champion, today appears to have reached the big money plans of boxing after a struggle that few pugilists survive. Tonight Young Bob will face one of the East's best light-heavyweights, Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn. Victory for Fitzsimmons in this bout at Madison Square Garden will carry him far toward the goal which his father gained. Sporting followers favor Delaney, but expect a stiff battle.

"YES," wrote the man who had acquired his education by working out crossword puzzles, "I gnu your mother when she was a little girl in short dresses."

PURITAN BLUE LAWS WERE NOT SO BLUE

American Historian Declares Some Notions of Them Only Myths

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 15.—American history needs to be "de-bunked," in the opinion of Harold Underwood Faulkner, professor of history at Smith College.

Among other historical myths, according to Prof. Faulkner, is the popular belief that the Puritans had "blue" laws so stringent that it was a crime to kiss one's child, to make mince pie, or to play on any instrument except the drum, trumpet, or Jewsharp, on the Sabbath.

Faulkner, who is author of an American economic history which is a standard college text-book, does not dislike the Puritans. But he does have an aversion for certain popular notions about them.

NOT SO TYRANNICAL
"The Puritans," he says, "are popularly pictured as being more tyrannical in their laws than they actually were. The old New England criminal code was much less harsh than that of England at the same period. The English laws listed 31 offences punishable by death, at the beginning of the reign of James I. (in 1603). Massachusetts in 1641, and Connecticut a year later, enacted the penalty of death for 12 offences only."

"When moralists of today denounce the public for its close following of court proceedings in sex scandals, they are touching on a pastime which was enjoyed among the Puritans. 'Under their regulations, persons arrested for illicit actions were compelled to stand up before their church congregation and make a complete confession of the story of their offense. Undoubtedly events of this sort were relished by the Puritans in crowded meeting-houses every bit as much as they are today in our criminal courts.'"

LEADERS BACKED
Hard Coal Union Officials Approve Action Taken in Pennsylvania Strike

HAZLETON, Pa., Jan. 15.—The scale committee of the anthracite miners representing every local union in the hard coal fields, have adopted a resolution reaffirming "to the world our sanction, approval and support of the plans and policies" of the union leaders.

Thus was summed up in a long resolution, approving of every action so far taken by President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, and other leaders in conducting the hard coal strike.

LADY LAWYER (cross examining a witness)—Where were you on the night of February 19th?

Witness—Great Scott! Who do you think you are—my wife?
