FROM LABRADOR.

THE LATEST REPORT FROM THE COLLEGE EXPEDITION.

The Mosquito Produces the Most Lasting Impression—Interesting Description of the Progress of the Maine Party.

HOPEDALE, Labrador, Aug. 16.—If one were asked to express by a single word the most lasting impression produced upon him by a visit to Labrador he could do it most truly and effectually by the word mosquito. To say that they abound is stating it mildly. They are omnivorous and omnipresent, both by families and by tribes. There is no protection in the way of compounds which has yet achieved the promised result, and it remains for some enterprising 'Yankee' by his ingenuity to make a journey to this peninsula a pleasure and a delight by staying at home.

The one effectual armor which we have adopted is a "mosquito bag" made of finely meshed netting, fitting closely to the hat band, extending to the shoulders in folds and laid under the coat collar. The appearance produced by these bags is to say the least peculiar. The only compound which has produced any effect at all is made of carbolic acid and linseed oil. When put on in generous quantities the desired result is procured, but fresh applications must continually be made, and gloves for the hands are as necessary as the bag for the head.

Leaving Rigolette, the home of this business like insect, we enjoyed a beautiful sail down Hamilton Inlet, obtaining at its mouth some interesting bottom specimens by deep sea dredging. At Indian Harbor north of the Inlet we obtained some Eskimo skeletons which had been buried nearly 100 years. Their mode of burial showed traces of the missionary, the bodies enclosed in skin garments being placed in wooded boxes and buried one foot under the turf. When exposed to view the bones were encased in a coating of ice showing the presence of frost the year round. The graves were all dug facing the rising sun, indicating some religion the exact nature of which we have not yet been able to trace.

At Indian Harbor the fishermen were having the best success we have yet seen along the coast. The one great cry was for more salt, and large numbers of fish were spoiling for the want of that preservative. Some of the vessels were about to return to their Newfoundland homes with a full fare, one and one half months before their customery time.

It was a pleasing change after a week's sail down the coast, amid rocks and a vegetation of moss, spruce and lichens, to come in sight of Hopedale, the Garden of Labrador. It is at Hopedale that the principal station of the Moravian missions is established, and some of their best work done. Mr. Kaestner the missionary in charge treated us very hospitably and placed his time wholly at our disposal. During our stop at Hopedale we were enabled to vary the landscape of rocks with a view of large gardens of potatoes, turnips, cabbages and lettuce.

The missionaries spend a great deal of time upon these gardens, and fine walks, and from the sample of vegetables which they sent around, we thought with great success. At this station which was established in 1782 there is a settlement of about 150 Eskimo who are so far civilized as to live in wooden houses, and speak a little poor English. They live by fishing in the summer and by hunting in the winter, and are of course largely helped by the missionary post.

Their fishing and water hunting is all done in the old Eskimo boat, the Koyak. This boat is a peculiar looking object, about 20 feet long, made by stretching seal skin over a wooden frame. The boat is all covered except the small hole in the center about 2 feet in diameter where the Eskimo sits to propel the Koyak. The paddle is about 12 feet long and has a blade at each end the motion being first on one side and then on the other. By this means they can propel one much faster than a boat can be rowed, and could even catch our sail boat in a light breeze. In the Koyak the Eskimo can approach very near the seal, then either shoot or throw the harpoon.

The harpoon which is used by the Eskimo for seal hunting is used by that race alone and consists of three parts, the body or handle, the point and the barb. The handle is made usually of wood, is about five feet long and to it is fastened by strings of sealskin the point, the strings allowing the point to break off when the instrument is thrown. On the end of the point is fitted an ivory barb, tipped with iron, to which is tied by 8 fathoms of sealskin line a skin bladder or float. When the instrument enters the seal a sudden jerk breaks the the point from the handle, the barb remains in the seal which swims away with the float to mark his position, the handle floats and the Eskimo picks it up and fitting another point is ready for more game.

Many of their peculiar instruments were obtained which crude as they are show great ingenuity in their construction. On the fifteenth of August the Curlew, the mail steamer of the Newfoundland government, was seen in the distance and all hands were at once on deck to receive the first mail since leaving Halifax, July 3rd. It was a grand reception which we tendered her and the 1800 miles which we had traversed dwindled to insignificance as we read the written words of distant friends wishing us well.

BOUND HER TO A BEDPOST

HAVERHILL WOMAN'S THRILLING EXPERIENCE WITH ROBBERS.

Covered With a Revolver She is Forced to Yield up $1300 to the Two Desperadoes—She is Left Gagged and Fettered—The Crime Coolly Executed by Daylight.

HAVERHILL, Sept. 6.—That a house within a stone's throw of Washington square could be entered by two desperadoes in broad daylight, its mistress covered with a revolver, bound and gagged, and $1,300 stolen from her, and the villans escape before any alarm was spread, seems almost incredible.

Yet such an event happened yesterday afternoon, even while people were passing the house and two policemen were patrolling beats not a gunshot away. The victim was Mrs. Hattie Elkins, nearly 60 years old. She has resided here for over five years, and manages the Elm House, a large lodging house on Emerson street.

It was 4.30 o'clock when Carrie Burnham, Mrs. Elkins' grand-daughter, went to the door of Mrs. Elkins' room and tried to get in. Finding the door locked, she called to her grandmother, but the latter could only groan. The noise frightened the girl, who called her mother Mrs. Nellie Burnham. The latter forced an entrance into the room, found Mrs. Elkins gagged and bound to a bedpost, and immediately released her.

To the Herald correspondent Mrs. Elkins related the details of the robbery.

"I had just laid down on the sofa for a short nap when the rap at the door came. I didn't answer at once and they rapped again, louder. I responded and opened the door. Instantly two men sprang into the room. One was short, very thick-set, light complexioned and wore a heavy light mustache. He was dressed in dark clothes and wore a soft slouch hat.

The other was tall, nearly six feet, powerfully built, dark complexioned with a dark mustache. He wore a gray suit of clothes and a soft black hat. Both were men of respectable appearance.

"The short one pulled down the curtain with one hand, and with the other drew a revolver, saying: 'mum's the word,' The tall one locked the door and then turned with the demand: 'give us your money,' I put my hand in my pocket to give him my purse. The tall one said 'I don't want that,' and the other followed with: 'She told you where it was; there's no false modesty about this.'

"My money had always been carried in a pink cambric bag pinned to the inside of my corset, and the tall one at once tore my clothes away and grabbed this bag. Then the short man said: 'we've got to fix her now, so that she can't make an alarm before we get out."

"The other opened a bureau drawer and took from it a ball of twine, with which he tied my wrists across each other, then tied my feet together, and setting me on the floor tied hands and feet together, and tied me to a bedpost. Then he got two handkerchiefs and jammed them into my mouth. I thought I should die. They then went out through two closets, and out of the house through a rear way."

"I heard my little grand-daughter come to the door and heard her go up stairs, but could do nothing. There was in the bag $300 in $100 bills, $400 in $20's, $100 in various bills, one note of $300 and two others of $100 each against Martin L. Stover. I never saw those faces before, but I shall know them if I ever see them again."

Mrs. Elkins does not believe in a bank account, and has always carried much money with her, although no one outside the household knew of it.

As yet no clew has been obtained as to the men who perpetrated the robbery, but the circumstances indicate that some one in the house was an accomplice.

Officers on Washington street and square state that Saturday morning, after the 1 o'clock freight train arrived, two men answering the description given by Mrs. Elkins of her assailants passed through the street and went up Emerson street.

AN AIR SHIP ON THE WING.

A Party of French Gentlemen on a Three Years' Voyage—The Ship Seen in the Kentucky Mountains.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

FLAT ROCK, Kentucky, September 8.—Mr. John Peters, of the Flat Rock precinct, relates that on Thursday evening he and several of his neighbors were surprised to see approaching over the horizon a large dark looking object, which, as it got nearer, proved to be a mammoth balloon. Suspended from it was a long cylinder shaped car or basket. The gentleman says he could plainly distinguish two forms in the car, one of whom was waving what he took to be a flag. When just over them they dropped out a peculiar looking bottle, which Mr. Peters secured and brought to town with its contents.

Inside of the bottle was a circular printed in French, which M. DeFavre, a French artist here, translated as follows:

On the 11th day of May, 1891, the following gentlemen embarked from Paris, France, in the airship Republique, on a voyage to last three years, in the interest of the French Topographical society. Vive la France!

M. LORRAINE,
M. DE AUVERGNE,
M. FLANDERS,
M. CAPET.

Mr. Peters says the balloon was about half a mile high, and could be plainly distinguished for an hour, when darkness hid it from view. M. De Favre says the expedition was being organized when he left France, a year and a half ago, and is backed by some of the wealthiest capitalists of that country. The object is to more thoroughly study the topography of the globe.

A gentleman from Cynthiana says the balloon was also seen in that neighborhood, but was very near out of sight at the time.—Cor. Louisville Courier Journal.

A TALE OF THE SEA.

POLICE AND BOATMEN BEATEN OFF BY A DRUNKEN SAILOR.

The Boat was Allowed to Drift Away in the Mist and has not been Heard of or Seen Since.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

LONDON, Sept. 8.— A startling story is telegraphed to this city from Deal, in Kent.

According to the report received, loud cries for help, mingled with oaths and curses, were heard some distance seaward, and almost directly off the town of Deal. The local policemen immediately entered a boat and put to sea, in order to inquire into the mysterious cries. The police, however, had been proceeded and distanced by two Deal boatmen, who also went to the rescue.

The boatmen found a boat of the ship G. L. Waters, and witnessed a horrible fight which was going on in the small craft.

Crouching in the stern of the boat was her captain, holding a little boy in his left arm, and a young sailor, both desperately defending themselves against the attack of another man. The latter according to the boatmen, was an athletic seaman mad drunk, who was attacking the captain and the young sailor with his sheath knife.

Upon the approach af the boatmen the drunken seaman threw the oars overboard, attacked them with his knife, and refused to allow them to rescue the occupants of the small boat. The mad seaman beat off the boatmen, and later on, also beat off the police who came upon the scene. The result was that the ship's boat was allowed to drift away in the mist and eventually disappear.

Later in the day search for the drifting boat and it occupants was renewed, but up to 3 p. m. nothing has been received from Deal on the subject.

FRENCH WOMEN FIGHT A DUEL.

They Hack Each Other in Most Unconventional Fashion.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE GAZETTE.

PARIS, Sept. 8.—An exciting scene occurred yesterday at Entry, in the Avenue Des Ternes, when two young women, Laure Siroux and Anna Gervais, both under twenty years, after quarrelling, suddenly determined to settle their differences in the manner which is approved among French journalists.

They armed themselves with long knives instead of the recognized duelling swords and adjourned to a conveniently secluded spot, where they started in with vigor.

The police, however arrived opportunely on the scene, but not soon enough to prevent both girls being so seriously wounded that they were obliged to be conveyed to the Banjon Hospital, where they are now both lying in great danger.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—News comes from San Diego of the death in the San Felipe Desert, in Lower California, of a young Mexican named Benito Cesena, and the narrow escape of a Chinaman from the same fate.

They became separated from a prospecting party and wandered off in the desert. Their mules died and after enduring terrible torture from thirst the two men reached the Gulf of California. Cesena fell down unable to proceed further, but the Chinaman made a raft and reached a schooner lying off shore. When the crew landed they found Cesena dead. They were in sight of water but did not know how to reach it.

CUT WITH A KNIFE.

John Williams, a Seaman, Twice Stabbed by a Russian Sailor—Result of a Drunken Brawl.

A crowd of sailors got into a row on Brittain street last evening and one of them was stabbed twice in the neck by one of his companions. They were all more or less under the influence of liquor at the time. Prompt medical assistance saved the injured man's life and he is now resting in the hospital in a fair way to recovery. He is a young man who gave the name of John Williams. His alleged assailant is a Russian Finn Berut Roosengren, 22 years old.

So far as could be assertained the men commenced quarreling over their drinks in Mrs. Bennet's saloon. One of their number named Dineen got into an altercation with Roosengren as to who should pay for the drinks. It seems that Roosengren had just paid 72 cents for liquor the others had consumed and while he had called for a second round it was evident that he thought some other person should pay for them. This did not suit Dineen who insisted on the Russian paying for what he had ordered, and when he continued to refuse Dineen wanted to fight. The difficulty was arranged, and the whole party adjourned to James Miller's boarding house, and they took up quarters in the kitchen. The brawl was resumed and Dineen and the Russian clinched. Williams went to his friend's assistance and was stabbed in the neck. The instrument used was a small pocket knife and the wounds though not deep are dangerously near the jugular vein. The sight of blood stopped the row.

Williams rushed over to James McKinney's drug store and while there he fainted. Police Surgeon Berryman was sent for and dressed Williams' wounds. Chief Clark and a strong detachment of officers were quickly on the ground. Miller's house was searched but Roosengren was not there. A general search was then made and Roosengren was found on board the bark Lepreaux by officer Burchill. His clothing was badly spattered with blood.

Roosengren, Dineen and two other sailors named Morillon Earnst and Levine Pierre were escorted to the central station. This afternoon Magistrate Ritchie and clerk Henderson went to the hospital and took the information of Williams.

The sailor Williams was of the bark Lizzie Burrill. He left the vessel some time ago and has since been staying at Miller's. He is a native of Liverpool, England, twenty-one years old and has been on the seas for five years. His mother resides in Oxford, England. This is the third time he has been stabbed. Twice before he was cut by Spaniards, once in Cardiff two years ago and once in Buenos Ayres one year ago. The first wound was on the left thigh and the second on the calf of the same leg.
