ır.

N. Manager.

they are

VOLUME XXIX

LONDON, ONTARIO SATURDAY, JANUARY /2 1907

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND

ANALYSES THE DEPLORABLE CONDITION OF AFFAIRS IN FRANCE -- SHOWS WHY THE OPPO ENTS OF THE CHURCH ARE IN CONTROL.

St. Paul, Dec. 23.—France is in the hands of her foes, Archbishop Ireland declared to day in a sermon at the cathedral, in which he analyzed the situation in regard to the struggle between the Church and State. The republican form of government, he said, is for the most part mythical. France, the Archbishop asserted, is a Catholic nation, the great majority of the people being in sympachy with the Church. Yet they permit themselves to be shorn of their power through indifference to the ballot and because they allow themselves to be imposed upon by enemies of the Church.

Archbishop Ireland said the people of France never had learned to exercise intelligent suffrage. Old tradi-of France never had tearned to exer-cise intelligent suffrage. Old tradi-tions and old issues prevail, and it is easy, he declared, for a small and well organized party to gain control. But he predicted that the battle would be ended soon and the Caurch and the government resume close relations.

The French clergy, the Archbishop said, were to blame to some extent for conditions. "Saints before the altar," he said, "they are cowards before the election urn," refraining from exerting their influence for the best interests of the country.

WHOLE WORLD STIRRED.

The Archbishop said:
"The conflict raging at the present time between the Church and State in France awakens universal and profound interest. It could be otherwise, were it only for the personalities of the con testants—on the one side the Roman Catholic Church, which for agos has awayed the moral and religious life of tens of millions of mankind and demand as in heaven's name, the right to continue its work adown the coming ages on the other the grande nation, which since the days of Clovis and Charlemagne has reveled in the title of 'eldest daughter' of that Church, and has held so long the most conspicuous place in the vanguard of religion and of civilization.

"We ask, What are the causes of the conflict? What are to be the re-

" For the moment the situation is undoubtedly serious, and serious for the one and for the other of the contestants. Yet, seen more anear, it reveals no coloring of despair either for France or for the Church in France. PREDICTS END OF STRIFE.

field of battle, dropping from the skies sunshine and peace, and begetting, both in the Church and in France, joy and in the Church and in France, joy and exultation that the passage at arms, angry as it code was, has opened the way to a clearer understanding of mutual interests, to a warmer glow of oiden mutual love.

"And now. by Act of Parliament, the Concordat is abolished, a regime of separation is instituted.
"Let not Americans be misled by coorde which have a totally different.

words which have a totally diffe ent signification in their land from what is wed to them in France. Separation of the Church from the State in Amer ica means liberty and justice; there it means servitude and oppression. "Speaking on Friday last to the Cardinals present in the Vatican X. said of the French situation esent in the Vatican, Pius are ready to submit to separation from the State, but it must be a lair separ ation—such as obtains in the United States, in Brazil, in Great Britain, in Holland—and not a subjection.' No Catholic in the United States makes objection to sepa ation, for here separation means exactly what it purports

SEES RIGHT IN POLICY.
"Under advice from the head of the Church, the Bishops of France refused the associations offered by the law of separation. They acted from principle separation. They acted from principle; in the interest of religion they could not approve such associations; they could not by tolerating them appear to approve them. They are not rebels against the laws of the country. The associations, as the minister of education, M. Briand, himself declared, were contractable principles. tion, M. Briand, himself declared, were not statutes binding upon citizens; they were privileges tendered to the Church which she was free to accept or reject. She has rejected them. Pope and Bishops knew full well the consequences that were to follow; the spirit of the government was not hidden from their eyes; it was an era of correcution; but, if no other escape persecution; but, if no other escape from persecution were possible than the acceptance of the law of associa tions, they were ready to welcome per-

"It is a lamentable fact that there is in France a party bent on the destruction of religion. The war is made on the Catholic Church because she in France represents religion. In reality, in intent and in fact, the war is against Christianity under any form, against religion of any kind, against the idea itself of a God reigning over men.

OLD SPIRIT IS REVIVED. "The old spirit of Voltaire and the encyclopedists of the eighteenth century never died out in France. It had an outburst of triumph in the revolution when God was declared nonexistent, and infamy itself, denoted the 'Goddess of Reason,' was uplifted to adoration upon the altar of the Cathedral of Paris. It slumbered a while under succeeding imperial and royal regimes; it has reawakened to new vigor in the freedom allowed to thought and speech that the reasont rapublic. ontburst of triumph in the revolution when God was declared nomexistent, and infamy itself, denoted the 'Goddess of Reason,' was uplifted to adoration upon the altar of the Cathedral of Paris. It slumbered a white under succeeding imperial and royal regimes; it has reawakened to new vigor in the freedom allowed to thought and speech by the present republic.

"This party of inadels and atheists is far from being France, as I shall later say, but it is active, persistent, unscrupulous, and it steers the ship of state into the front. It has grasped the helm of power, and it steers the ship of state into the darkest depths of unbelief and irreligion. Yesterday it was Combes, the most brutal of all; to-day it is Clem-nessu, somewhat more ubdued in his hatred, but yet a leader in the fight. "With such men, and with others dividing with them public power, even if less violent adapts of irreligion, there reigns another idea—the omnipotence of the State. This was ever the plague of France—even when her rulers were devout Catholics.

STATE WANTS NO RIVAL. "The State must control all agencies of power; it must brook no rival Even the Church must be in the haods of the government. So was it with Louis X.V. and Napoleon; so is it with the republic. The republic is a with the republic. The republic is a name in France; it has been well said of it that it sleeps on the bed of Louis XIV. France has never understood the meaning of a republic, which is respect for private and personal liberty, which is to leave as much as cossible to the people, to take to the possible to the people, to take to the State only what is needed for the public weal. The most republican of republicans, seated in parliament, set out at once to regulate all things to their own liking. We are the State, they cry out, as Louis XIV, once said: 'I am the State.' And the State is the great power and all must think and act as the State wills. This is certainly as the State wills. This is certainly the spirit of the indels, who now rule the country; and I am not at all sure it were not to some degree, at least, the spirit of good Catholics, who, were they to be tomorrow in the ascendency, should believe it their duty to make every one go to Mass, as the present government assumes it as their duty to let no one go to Mass.

CAUSE OF THE SITUATION. CAUSE OF THE SITUATION.

"I know france from the channel to the Mediteracean; I know her cities and her villages; I know her people—her aristocracy, her bourgeoise and her peasantry—and I know them to be Catholic. How then, explain the political situation? There are several causes to be noted. The masses are not used to political life. For ages they were governed: they do not com they were governed; they do not com prehend the art of governing. Put a party in power—it names the hundreds of thousands of officials from the prefect of a department to the humblest school teacher, to the village constable; they they speak to the crowds around th -crowds who read little, who think little, and the crowds in their turn obey the mandate. An independent self argued suffrage has not entered into the popular life. Nor is there among the masses the ambition to gain political victory. Paris for a century and a half has ruled France; establish a new regime, monarchical or republic, in Paris this evening; the provinces awaken to morrow morning monarchical or republican It will require long years to decentralize power in France, to give to each citizen consciousness of personal independence, to obtain through universal suffrage a true expression of national will. SMALL CLIQUE MAY RULE. "There is no other country where well-organized and stirring fraction of the population can sway so easily the masses and impose upon them its will.

"The clergy, who are now the chief sufferers, are much to blame. They, too, have retained, even at the altar and in the pulpit, the spirit of passive obedience inherited from old regimes. Admirable in teaching the catechism, in administering the Sacracatechism, in administering the Sacra-ments, hey have never learned the virtues of public life, they have never quickened beneath the activities of the battlefield. Their example and their preaching have left their disciples in the same passivity—and these know nothing of the public defense of prin ciples; saints before the altar, they are cowards before the electoral urn. "Then, French Catholics have been unfortunate in many of their leader and spokesmen. These remain demean ors of the past, partisans of buried political regimes. If the masses of the pointer regimes. If the masses of the people have learned any one thing, it is this—that France is a republic, that they are republicans. But the monarchists are numerous, chiefly the old nobility, the most generous patrons of and too many of the clergy who still read their politics in Bossuet and Massilion, who judge the republi-can form of government by the Jacobin republic of contemporary France. POINTS WEAKNESS OF FRANCE.

"Here is the weakness of the Cath-olics of France - the infidel, the socialist, who solicits votes cries out: 'The republic is in peril; no republican must cast his vote for a monarchist—even that monarchist be otherwise the best and purest of men; and the masses vote for the infidel or the socialist, in order that the republic survive, trusting to the republic to do in the long run what is most service able for France and even for religion

"The evil goes farther. There is an infidel or a socialist candidate, and opposed to him a republican, moderate, conservative, who clings to a peaceful, even religious France. But he is a republican; monarchists, generally well-known Catholics, put up a candidate of the following interesting communica-tion from Rev. William Ba.ry, D.D.: "On December 11th the Concordat expires and the public property of the Church in France is to be confissated. l ask you to print as a judgment on the day and the act, though written in 1790, some noble words by our great countryman, Edmund Burke. They will be found in Vol. II. of his works, p. 377. 'Reflections on the Revolution in France. They seem to prophesy of what has lately been done to the religious orders, and they set in their true light the 'tender mercies' which our Jacob ns of the third republic are not ashamed to boast of as marking their conduct towards the Caurch they would fain annihilate. I feel proud that the first of Irishmen should have bequeathed to after times a protest de serving to be engraved on the doors of that Archbishop's house from which Cardinal Richard, at the age of eighty four, is to be thrust out into the streets of Paris, while the into the streets of Paris, while the atheist, M Viviani, enters in "Who but a tyrant, says Burke, 'could think of seizing on the property of men, unaccured, unheard, untied by whole descriptions, by hundreds and thousands together? Who that had not lost every trace of human in a said think of casting down men. ity, could think of casting down men of exalted rank and sacred function some of them of an age to call at once for reverence and compassion—of cast-ing them down from the highest situa tion in the Commonwealth wherein they were maintained by their own landed property, to a state of indigence, de sion and contempt?

EDMUND BURKE ON THE CHURCH IN FRANCE

PROTEST BY "THE PIRST OF IRISH-MEN ' DURING THE REIGN OF TERROR.

The London Catholic Times prints

The confiscators truly have made some allowance to their victims from the scraps and fragments of their own tables from which they have been so harshly driven, and which have been so bountifully spread for a feast to the so bountifally spread for a less to the harpies of usury. But to drive men from independence to live on alms is itself great cruelty. * * * To many minds this punishment or degrad ation and infamy is worse than death. Undoubtedly it is an infinite aggrava tion of this cruel suffering, that the persons who were taught a double prejudice in favor of religion, by education and by the place they held in the administration of its functions, are to receive the remnants of their property as aims from the profane and impious hands of those that had plundered them of all the rest; to receive (if they are at all to receive) * * * from the insolent tenderness of known and avowed atheism the maintenance of religion, measured out to them on the standard of one contempt in which it is held." EDMUND BURKE ON THE SUFFERINGS OF

THE FRENCH CLERGY DURING THE REIGN OF TERROR.

From an autograph letter now in the pose sion of a citizen of New York. Dear Sir: I have just received etter from my friend, Mr. Dowdeswell, letter from my friend, Mr. Doweeswell, informing me that a desire has been expressed by several gentlemen not only in the University, but in the county and city of Oxford, of contributing to the relief of the French clergy suffering a grievous persecution two the neutration of an unexampled from the usurpation of an unexampled and hitherto successful combination of all the impiety, crime and baseness which could be collected from all parts desolate. There is no doubt that if these prin-There is no doubt that if these principies and cabals could be admitted in to the country, that, first vitiating the morals and altering the temper and character of the people, they would desolate England in the same manner.

Against the possible prevalence of such factions and their pernicious maxims, I look upon the University of Oxford as the firmest bulwark we have. I look upon their late happy and wise choice upon their late happy and wise choice of the Duke of Portland to be a pledge of their zeal and perseverance in the same cause, and of their disposition both in this present age and to all pos-terity to unite the lovers of the Church, and of the laws, liberties and morals of the country of all descriptions in opposition to the system of atheism, persecution, sacrilege and assassination which prevail amongst our unhappy

I trust that those who subscribe to the French clergy in so doing do not only wish to act under the general in-fluence of a diffusive Christian charity. but would express their abhorrence of the principles of that persecution which by stripping these worthy the principles of that persecution which by stripping these worthy ecclesiastics, first of their property, then of their liberty, and after slaughtering in a most inhuman manner vast multitudes of them, at last stripped them of their country and sent them naked and resourceless to live on the mercy of strangers. I have no doubt that you, sir, and the persons who lead in the university and country will exert your university and county will exert your influence in favor of a charity which whilst it chooses the most proper ob-jects for succor does so much honor to the nation which, casting aside the narrow spirit of sect and long national rivalry, exerts the common principles of honor, hospitality, religion and humanity. I have the honor to be with the greatest esteem and respect, dear Sir, your most faithful and obedient humble servant.

EDM. BURKE.

There are a great many people who still harbor the idea that the Catholic Church was during a good part of her history opposed to science, and that it hampered the teaching and develop ment of science during many centuries Nothing more false has ever been said Nothing more false has ever been said than this. From the earliest dawn of our modern education, from the founda-tion of the universities in the thirteenth century down to the present time, the Catholic Church has always been intent on encouraging science and

It is true that there are certain in cidents in history that seem to show the opposite of this, writes the distinguished scholar, Dr. J J. Walsh, in St. John's Quarterly, from which we quote. At one time a number of theologians were convinced that the earth was not round and that there were no people iving on the other side of it. The exantipodes. As these theologians were prominent, it seemed for a time as though they voiced the sentiments of the Church herself. As a matter of fact, however, at the very time when this question was most disputed, there were prominent churchmen, as, for in stance, the famous Cardinal Nicholas of Cusa, who declared that the earth was ound and moved like the other stars.

Then there came the Gallileo troversy. This was nearly a hundred years after Cardinal Nicholas' de-claration about the movement of the earth, yet a congregation in Rome declared that Gallileo must not teach that the earth moved round the sun This was only another mistake mad-by churchmen, and it is now very well understood that the Church itself was understood that the Church itself was not involved. These happenings were only incidents in history. They do not represent the policy of the Church. In order to appreciate the policy it must be realized how many faithful churchmen were themselves distinguished scientists.

One of the most important of the scientists of modern times is Coper scientists of modern times is Coper nicus, the famous astronomer, who first demonstrated the truth that the earth moved around the sun in stead of the sun moving around the earth, as it appears to do. Copernicus was a Canon of the Cathedral of Franchers in Garmany. Fam. scientists of modern times is Coper Franchberg in Germany. Far from being disaffected towards the Church, ne was of great assistance to Bishop Ferber in keeping his diocese in the Church at the time of the so-called reformation. Copernicus lived for the contract of the cont reformation. Copernicus lived for more than ten years after Luther's religious revolt in Germany began, for this is the true name of the so called reformation, yet never had he the slightest thought of joining in the protest against the Church.

Only the year after Gallileo was con-demned at Rome, the great Jesuit, Father Kircher, was summoned to the papal city to teach and write books nearly all phases of science, and far from being hampered in his work he was encouraged by the Pope and the Cardinals and all the high ecclesiastics of Rome in the formation of his famous museum, the first of its kind in the world, and one that represented an im-portant step in progress and in science. Within a half century after the Gal ileo trial, Stensen, the famous Danish anatomist, became a convert to Catho licity and was ordained a priest within a year after he wrote a book on geol ogy, from the modern standpoint, that was ever published. So important is Stensen's work considered in the history of geology by those who know the science best that twenty years ago when the International Congress of Geologists met at Bologns, in Italy, they adjourned the last session of their meeting to Florence in order formally to naveil a tablet to the mem ory of Stensen, whom they did not hesitate to acclaim as the father of modern geology.

Within a few years after his geological discoveries Stensen was made a Bishop and took up missionary work in north of Germany in order to bring back as many Germans as possible to the fold of the Church which he had learned to leve so well and in which h had found peace for his soul, though he had been brought up a Protestant and had lived nearly forty years of his life in the Protestant Church. Stensen is one of the greatest discoverers in the his tory of medicine, but there are others, such as Winslow, the anatomist, and Horner, in this country, who became converts to Catholicity in the midst of their scientific work. This of itself should be enough to demonstrate that the Church does not oppose science, as such an attitude would surely have de-terred men of this kind from coming to

There are only a few examples meant to show that in spite of the Gallileo incident there was no real opposition to science on the part of the Courch. In the question of the movement of the earth and the existence of antipodes there seemed to be question of contra vening the meaning of Scriptures. This was the reason for the difficulty, and not any real or fancied opposition In every science the greatest games belong to Catholics. This is as true in the sciences which developed early as in those which have developed in to, France, in all probability, would have escaped the religious persecution of the present day. Monarchial ideas and plottings have done dreadful injury to the Church in France."

CATHOLIC CHURCH AND SCIENCE.

DR JAMES J. WALSH CORRECTS MANY ERRONE US OPINIONS REGARDING wore faithful adherents of the Church wore faithful adherents of the Church at which Pope Plus X. gave the red place of the church in France."

A UNITED EPISCOPACY IS THE PONTIFF'S SULACE of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of electricity named after them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of their discoveries, and both of whom have had forms of a clearly provided them because of the cl electricity, and whose name is also preserved in modern science, was an extremely devout French Catholic. Few men have ever been as faithful in the practice of their religious duties as he was, and Ozaman, who lived in his house with him for a time, considered him also a saint. Ohm, the German mathematician, to whom we owe the laws with regard to the resist ance of electricity in passing through various media, was a German Catholic who for a time taught in a Jesuit school. His name is also commonly school. His name is also commonly used as a term in electricity.

Biology, which developed entirely during the nineteenth century, and which is usually supposed to be rather unorthodox in its tendencies, also came almost entirely from great Catholic electrics. Lements who first taught scientists. Lamarck, who first taught evolution; Theopore Schawann, the di-coverer of the Cell Doctrine; Johann Muller, the father of Modern German Medicine; Claude Bernard, the grea French Physiologist; finally Louis Pasceur, the most distinguished name of them all, the greatest name in nine teenth century science, all of these men were Catholics.

Unfortunately these facts are not known by the members of the Church and the consequence is that even they semetimes are deceived into thinking that the utterly mistaken assertions of Protestants in these matters are true. With regard to any slander against the Church, all that is needed for its correction is more knowledge. The truth it is that sets men's mind's free from erroneous assertions of all kinds, and no Catholic need fear to tell all the truth. There are dark spots on the Church's history. Even about these Church's history. Even about these truth must be known. In this matter it must not be forgotten that Leo XiII. of glorious memory said when there was question of opening the Vatican Library to the world and one of the librarians said: "But, Holy Father, there are many things in the library that relate incidents unfavorable to the Popes" The great Leo answered: opes" The great Leo answered:
By all means le: them have these, it some of you modern timorous Catholics had lived at the time of Christ you would surely have concealed the fact that Judas betrayed His Master and Peter denied Him On the other hand, where the truth is all to the honor of the Church, it should be widely known among Catho lies, and then slander will soon be era dicated. - Providence Visitor.

ANOTHER NEW YEAR,

Another lease of time —but the same old world and the same old hab its! Will our lives run on thus to the end? Will the things unreformed continue unbettered ?

Yet men and women do change and have changed their ways of living. Often it is sorrow or misfortune that works the transformation. The calectar comes to us every New Year and suggests itself to us as an occasion for good resolutions untinged with sorters and appearing the company of the com row and uninspired by affliction.

This epoch of new time may profit ably suggest meditations for each of us on the end of all time. Some New Year will certainly dawn for every man along in whose months Death will come. Is your house in order? Have you done all that your condition you done all that your condition of life renders possible to make your career count for something?

much thankfulness for the opportunity vouchsaled us, let us then cross this imaginary threshod which separates the count called I906 from 1907—resolving that it shall mean a truer mani festation of the better promptings of our hearts and our minds. - Catholic

A MINISTER AT A MISSION MASS Sacred Heart Review

At the Methodist preachers' meeting in Wesleyan Hall, Bromfield street, Boston, last Monday, the Rev. Dr. L. B. Bates, the father of Ex Governor Bates, told of a visit he made recently to a Catholic church where a mission was being held and where he saw an edifying sight. It was a mission for mea, and at the early hour of 5.30 clock in the morning, when the services began, the church was literal ly packed with men, and some were even kneeling on the steps in the glim-mering light of the dawn. Said Dr.

They respectfully made way for me as I entered and the officiating clergy man invited me to come forward. I never heard a Methodist minister preach a better sermon, and when at the close of the sermon the priest asked the men to stand and promise that they would keep the good resolu-tions made during the mission the vast congregation responded.

"These Catholic priests, by their missions, have brought light out of darkness, and the work of the missions has proved to be a great blessing, sav-ing many souls."

When a simple soul is to act, it considers only what it is suitable to do or say, and then immediately begins the action, without losing time in thinkin the sciences which developed early as in those which have developed in recent times. In anatomy the great names are those of Vesslius, Malpighi, Stensen, Columbus, Morgagni and many others of the Italians. All of them were faithful Catholics. In electricity, which developed during the nineteenth century, the two great est names are those of Folta and Galvof St. Rigonia, Hungary, and precon-ized eighty four Bishops, including tem for French sees, was the occasion of a notable allocution by the Holy Father.

1473

"Every day," said the Pontiff, "the increasingly sad storm of vicissitudes is beating down on the Church, involving great misery.
" More than ever now," his Hell-ness continued, "the Church can be compared with a ship buffeted by the es in the midst of the ocean our faith does not vaciliate in the least. Indeed, we are more than ever sus-tined by our belief in the efficacious assistance of Christ, who, when the time to succor us comes, will rise and command the wind and sea to go down.

so that the perfect tranquillity so much desired will beam on us."

The greatest comfort of Catholicism, a comfort which is confounding the enemy, the Pope added, is the "singular concord which prevails throughout the concord which prevails throughout the episcopacy so fully united to us.
May God make all Catholica conform to these most brilliant examples of their astors and follow their directions, This imposes a sacred duty on the Christi n profession, which is empha-sized by the present needs of religion, namely, that where (alluding to France) here is hostility against the Church, the people there should be urged to the people there should be urged to proceed with compact strength, and in tho e regions (alluding to Spain) where nostility is threatened, Catholics should generously sink all personal animosity and dissensions and neglect no means permitted by the laws and by the Christian conscience to overcome

The Blessed Virgin Mary.

The peace which Carist came to bring upon the earth has been much distarbed lately by those heretics who, from high places in the Church, have been denying the virgin birth of the Saviour. We cannot look with indifference men the strength to the dead of the saviour. ference upon the attempt to tone down We take it ill that any one should give the lie to the Archangel Gabriel. We cannot think as meanly of the historical accuracy of such historians as Matthew and Luke as do these new heretics. To us it is a vital matter that our Lord was born of the Virgin Mary, for it assures us of the sinless-ness of H's hum nity, and the in-tegrity of His divinity. The Virgin Mary does not thereby become an object of adoration. She remains the sweet humble "handmaiden of the Lord." Her wonder at the Incarnation becomes our wonder, and her Magnificat the Church's song of praise. The Lutheran.

FREEMASONS RESPONSIBLE.

THEY HAVE BEEN WORKING FOR YEARS FOR DOWNFALL OF CHURCH IN FRANCE SAYS ONE OF THEM

Statements charging French Free-masons with the responsibility for the present situation in France were cor-roborated by Francois J. Loisel, of South Orange. N J., who is a former member of a Parisian Masonic lodge, in an interview with a reporter of the Monitor, of Newark.

"For the last five years French Freemasonry, which I have renounced, has worked assiduously for the downfall of Catholicism in France. The work was on their public program and I have reports of conventions and published articles to verity what I say. I never helped any movement with such an object in view and resigned from the lodge because of the attitude "Its power was directed toward breaking the Concordat. Every law advocated by them had this object in view, and the Masons took oaths to elect only members to municipal and general councils who would pledge support to the separation of State and Courch and suppression of the governmeat contributions to the clergy. I heard M. Masse, a Freemason deputy of Nievre, declare the work would be completed only when the bond that unites Church and State was com-pletely broken." Mr. Loisel then showed copies of the report of the French Congress of 1903. There were passages which clearly pointed to the party known as the 'Bloc' which secured a majority at the election of 1902 as being child of French Freemasonry.

M. Masse is quoted as saying to the convention that if the "Bloc" was able to exist it was sol-ly because throughout the Masonic lodges Republicans and free-thinkers who belong to different schools and in many things are opposed to one another, had brought into harmony. A resolution was passed congratulating Mr. Combes and promising support.

and promising support.

"There was hestancy on the part of some masons," continued Mr. Loisel, after he submitted documentary proof. "They predicted the Church would gain in strength if they were liberated. Senator Gadaud said wellmade law governing the associations would prevent 'perils of that kind arising.' From recent occurences the laws enacted probably provided for this, because the State retains supremacy over the Church."