HALIFAX, Sept. 28.—Hovering between life and death at the Victoria General Hospital, with the odds terribly in favor of the grim reaper, Mrs. Rose Kayl, wife of Samuel Kayl, an ex-soldier of the R. C. R., lies in ex-freme agony. In the men's ward lies her husband, twice over an attempted destroyer of human life. He first en-deavored to dispatch his wife with a vegetable masher, and afterwards drank poison and stabbed himself in the lungs. Both were rendered power-less to act further by reason of their wounds. Kindly neighbors acted the part of good Samaritans and endeav-ored to stay the hand of death. About five o'clock this morning the fellow-tenants of the house, 116 Maitland street, were awakened by horrible sounds from the up-stairs apartments. Investigating they found Mrs. Kayl dying on the sidewalk, her leg broken and her skull fractured, blood flowing from wounds on her face. She was not dressed, having sprung from bed to avoid a horrible death. Answering questions put to her she replied that she had fallen out of the third-story window to the pavement. To a police offi-cer she made an almost incoherent statement to the effect that her husband had been trying to kill her and in endeavoring to escape she had fallen from the window.

Further investigations were made by the police. Upstairs lying in the bed with only his shirt on him lay the husband of the woman below. Beside the bed was a pool of blood. On the breast of the unconscious man was a self-inflicted wound made by a pocket-knife. The pocket-knife, with the blade opened and the blocd stains on it, was lying on a table near by. On the same table was a bottle labelled "Poison," the contents of which had been swallowed by the would-be murderer. Under the bed tick was fund a wooden vegetable masher, the hardwood handle broken by the brutal blows dealt by the infuriated man on The police found one other article

It was a letter written before the tragedy by the ex-soldier to the mother of the woman he was about to kill. It was addressed to Mrs. David Henry, Bathurst, N. B. It read: Dear Mother—By the time you get this letter me and Rose will nave passed away and be in the next world. She is all the cause of this going away." Brunswick and P. E. I. saw some forty delegates present and considerable business was transacted. The first session was held in the Presbyterian Hall this morning, when devotionol exercises were conducted by Mrs. J. Seymour, St. John, The comvention was then called to order by Mrs. J. H. Grey, Fairville, president. The crusade hymn was sung and crusade psalm read. After the appoint ment of some committees the past year's work of various departments was considered. These were parlor meetings, systematic giving, fairs, militia and sailors. Mrs. O. D. Hanson, Fairville, reported for the sailors' department and showed that considerable had been accomplished, particularly in the way of providing comfort bags for seafarers. In regard to all departments it was shown that much morning the report of the superintendent of the heredity and hygiene de John, was presented. She delivered a brief address telling something of the progress of the work and incidentally speaking of her rocent visit to Kirkland, York Co., where a union has lately been organized with much interest displayed and excellent prospects of considerable good being accomplished. The feature of the afternoon session was an address on tuberculosis by Dr. H. Secord, Sackville. Dr. Secord delivered a comprehensive address; speaking of different ways in which white plague is spread and what can be done to present its ravages from increasing. He emphasized the mportance of fresh method of fighting disease and in the course of his remarks dwelt on the matter in which the disease may be spread by ordinary housefly and children travellers and others. The address was a most eresting one, as well as being one containing much instructive matter and a hearty vote of thanks was tenred the speaker.

Stratmen swore that on October 26, election day, they received $2 in a back room of the Liberal headquarters from R. H. Leary, practically without word having passed between them. All had made affidavits denying their original statements. The curious part of their story was that all the men denied having sold their votes. Two declared that they had already voted when the money was paid over, while the third. William Ashley, protested that he had no knowledge why the money was given. It also came out in evidence that Ashley had offered to make an affidavit denying that he had received any money and leave Ontario if Stratton paid him $200, while he implicated a man named Gates who is yet to be called, by stating that he demanded four hundred dollars. The respondent declined to pay a cent, and so Ashley told his story, which was remarkable for its inconsistencies and contradictions. Yet another of the petitioners' witnesses swore that he had been called to a local hotel, plied with liquor and then offered a roll of bills if he would make a charge of bribery and corruption, which he declined to do against seating Stratton.

VENING gowns for the autum and winter already indicate that there is to be a decided change from the exaggerated styles a last winter. There is still marked individuality, but the too conspicuous effects that were becomin to so few women and required to be s carefully made are no longer commanded by Dame Fashion as the only possible mode of dress. The one piece evening gown is no longe the only style, and in truth there are any number of extremely smart evening gowns now being made with skirt and waist separate. There are dressmakers who assert that only the separate wais and skirt should be made up, but this is too sweeping a command, for if the one piece effect is the more becoming then it should be chosen, and in consequence the modified Empire gown of last year, nodified to be on the latest lines, is not to be rashly discarded by any means, and if dealt with gently and carefully will still be extremely smart. The sheath gown will require much more attention to be brought up to date, for more material will be needed to give the required : ith of skirt, and the waist must be more clearly defined, even when the material hangs from the trimming or folds of the

Once again is the long waist considered it in the strange subtlety all modern dress the long waist line is more suggested than emphasized, for although, as has been said, last year's lines are no longer in favor, the straight lines have by no means gone quite out, of style, and the fashionable figure is still slender and narrow, an effect only possible with the straight draperies.

Skirts of evening gowns are much wider and longer, with the train almost exaggeratedly long, while in front and at the sides the skirt must be long enough, to more than touch the ground. The newest models are most graceful and effective, with their long sweeping trains, and in spite of their added width are so cleverly designed that they make the wearer look slender. Heavier materials are used than last season. The satins are of heavier quality, and brocades are being shown. The favorite weaves of satin have quite a lustre and look much richer than last year's, while there are many old friends among the new designs, but with new names. In spite of looking heavier in weight and richer in quality these new fabrics are singularly soft and pliable, so that they can be dealt with as easily almost as the extremely light weight charmeuse satin that in the clinging Empire and princess gowns has had such a wonderful and long lived popularity. many old friends among the new designs.

THE double box pleats in the back; about two inches apart, are to be noted in the newest evening gowns. These can be fastened upon the waist just under the shaped folds or the flat trimming of the waist, or can start from the natural waist line, hidden under the girdle, or again the draped folds of the waist, in this instance draped to give the long waisted effect. The lining of the skirt receives careful attention, and many time of the newest skirts are lined throughout it with chiffon or soft silk, the lining often eith attached, not in a separate, and always chan of some contrasting color. A most effective model in black satin is lined through that cost, that our with rose pink. The waist is cut exaggeratedly low and filled in to the customary line of the low cut waist, first with crossed folds of rose pink satin and above the satin folds of tulle the same shade of pink. The tariff had been based upon the experience of years ago, and its final effect had been the reduction of rates to places seldom shipped to, while to the three most important points, which receive 70 per cent of all the lumber shipped in Canada, the races had been raised. In this way the C. P. R. and the G. T.
