With the British Armies in Field, Sept. 23.—By Phillip in Montreal Gazette)—The Ge seem to have a special kind of for the Canadians and tried to them about Courcellette by sava tracks and heavy concentration artillery, and the Canadians back, life for life.

There were trappers among who devised cunning ways of ing at night over No Man's There were real Indian tactics between snipers. Night raids were organized and rehearsed with a so accuracy of detail that crea new method of trench warfare, the Germans feared.

The Canadian infantry had a cult operation. This ground the high ridge of Jolieres, down before them to the edge of village of Courcellette, where had been ordered to halt and co- strate, while reserve battalions French-Canadians on the right up to mop up the captured. A man trench ran at an angle their objective, and as they a ced the Canadians had to take en passant, as chess players, say, the flank capturing trench the same rate of progress as the tre and right. The French-Canad with their comrades on the right swung in a loop round the south half of the village and closed in invaded its streets. The captu Courcellette was one of the asto ing things in this battle of in and about and the place storming by much less than that ber—dugouts full of Germans routed out by a few men who c have been crushed and killed by odds against them.
