THRIFT QUESTION CONSIDERED BY CITY COUNCIL AT ITS MEETING LAST NIGHT

Urged by Deputation to Promote a Campaign in This City—St. Paul's Avenue Subway Again Topic of Discussion, Application Having Been Made to Dominion Railway Commission; Residents Want Erie Ave South a Residential Section.

The vital question of thrift was considered last evening by the city council, which was waited upon in this regard by a joint deputation from the Board of Trade and the Social Service League, urging the importance of the matter and calling upon the council to take action to promote a campaign locally. Upon its own recommendation, the finance committee was appointed to represent the council upon a joint committee, including delegates from the Board of Trade, the Social Service League and the Social Service League, and other matters were also discussed at full length, and when the council adjourned at 10.45, a comparatively early hour, there was still business uncompleted. Among the matters taken up were the question of establishing the further end of Erie avenue as a strictly residential section, in which regard deputations representing both sides, waited upon the council; the question of the St. Paul's avenue subway, illuminated by verbal encounters between the mayor and Ald. McBride, and the settlement of the pool-room license question by the third reading and passing of the by-law limiting the number to seven. A by-law was also passed, revoking publishing subventions of the city, establishing thirty-one in place of the present twenty-seven.

Thrift
Mr. Frank Cockshutt, president of the Social Service League, addressed the council on behalf of the thrift question, laying before them the matter of thrift, being fostered throughout the country by the Dominion and Provincial Governments. It was decided to appoint a local committee to further the project, and in this the council was looked upon to take the lead.

The question of utilization of the Dominion's resources and of the increasing food production should meet with the approval of all at the present time. The question of saving, being equal to the interests of the people in general and Empire at large, so that these two needs of increased production and increased saving tended toward the benefit of the people and the Empire.

Vegetable growing by individuals, the raising of one's own food, the speaker considered a patriotic matter; the investment of money in war bonds strengthened the financial resources of the Empire and the investors. All who stayed at home should unite in sustaining the Empire, and these two ways would be effective at the present time.

Mr. Cockshutt then requested the Council to appoint delegates to a joint committee including members of the Social Service League, Board of Trade, and the Trades and Labor Union. The co-operation of all classes was desired he slogan should be "a vegetable garden for every home, and a savings account for every individual."

War bonds were now being offered at $21.50, payable at the end of $25.00, at the face value of $25.00. The speaker considered that provision should be made for smaller savings, and suggested that they might be cared for by the council.

The re-adjustment period which must inevitably follow the war was looked forward to and these war bond savings might save the situation when the labor market became glutted following the release of hundreds of thousands of workers now employed in countless branches of war work, at home as well as those upon military service.

H. C. of L. Committee Report.
The committee on the high cost of living submitted to the council a report upon the matter of the cultivation of waste land. Ald. Mellen thought that the project of the Social Service League clashed into that of the H. C. of L. Committee. He spoke on behalf of the latter's report, expressing the opinion that the country was on the verge of a famine, if weather conditions this year were as bad as last. Hence every possible effort tending to increase production should be put forth throughout the entire Dominion, to which Great Britain and allies looked for great things in the way of an output of articles of food. He considered that the owners of vacant land should allow others to use it free of charge. The question of supplying seeds was one which must be taken up by the city, as would also the protection of outlying lots. The question whether the city could lend any aid in preparing the land for cultivation should rest with either the council at large or the Board of Works.

Ald. MacBride urged consideration of the plans of the high cost of living committee, which had the sympathy of the labor classes. He was strong in favor of the adoption of the report of the committee which he thought should not be dumped over to some other organization.

Ald. Symonds challenged the advocacy of submitting the report of the high cost of living committee to another committee of the council, in place of to the entire body. He was supported by Ald. MacBride, but Mayor Bowley ruled that the report had already been referred to the buildings and grounds committee and could not be repeated.

Communications.
On the motion of Ald. Mellen, seconded by Ald. Bragg, the minutes of the last meeting of the council were taken as read and adopted. The usual time lists and other regular reports were read and confirmed.

The manufacturers' committee estimated its expenditures for the year at $500. The gas committee, Ald. Dowling chairman also requested that a sum of money be set aside for its use as certain expenditures will be necessary in investigating the present gas situation.

Who's Guilty

Ald. Hollinrake inaugurated a discussion when he brought up the matter of a request from the Mayor of London, asking Brantford to send a delegation to confer with the provincial Government upon the matter of having city councils empowered to revise the statutes submitted to them by the various municipal boards.

The Mayor: "I can't answer that; I was away when the telegram reached the city."

Ald. Dowling: "Were you away on municipal business?"

Ald. MacBride wanted to hear the telegram read. The city clerk read it, stating that it had arrived Wednesday afternoon, when the Mayor was in Toronto.

Ald. English explained that the Mayor was in Toronto in connection with the Government road question, and thought that more time should have been given this city to send a delegation to the meeting.

Ald. MacBride thought the matter had been handled in a very unbusinesslike way.

The Mayor stated that the matter in question had not been dealt with in parliament.

Ald. MacBride exonerated the Mayor from blame in the matter, but thought that in his absence an alderman should be appointed to deal with such matters.

A petition calling for the declaration of that part of Erie Avenue between Emile street and Cayuga St. as a residential section, was submitted to the council by residents, who objected to the erection of a general store in their section, and desired to retain it as a residential district.

Mr. M. W. McEwen spoke on behalf of Mr. Thomas, who proposed to erect a joint residence and store. He considered that the section of the Municipal Act could prevent his action, as Mr. Thomas had owned the property in question for some years. Erie Avenue was the business street of Emile Place, and small stores were required to keep down the high cost of living. The section in question was already a business section, he submitted, and the sentiment of property owners must not be allowed to retard the wheels of progress. The building was to be erected in conformity with the building by-laws and regulations of the city.

Ald. Symonds, seconded by Ald. Hollinrake, moved that the City Solicitor be instructed to prepare a by-law declaring the district in question a residential section. Ald. Symonds submitted that the residents of a district had a right to fix the status of their district, and that there was already an over sufficiency of such stores in Emile Place, so that an additional one would be no gain to the district.

Ald. English liked fairness in all things, and believed that the projected store and residence would be an improvement over the present structure there, and that an additional store would help to reduce the high cost of living in the district. He submitted that many residents had no objection to the erection of the store, provided it was kept back in line with the other residences of the street, among them some who had signed the petition.

Ald. Dowling wanted the petition referred to the board of works, and the City Engineer, and no further action taken until a report was submitted to the council.

Ald. MacBride wanted the question disposed of and dealt with at once.

Ald. Jones advocated careful procedure and an endeavor to do the right thing, believing that the matter should be deferred until it could be better considered.

"Better safe than sorry" was the motto of Ald. Kelly, who favored the recommendation of Ald. Dowling.

Ald. Hollinrake urged against delay in the matter, and thought that the residents of the district should be given consideration and allowed to decide for themselves.

Ald. Bragg thought there was ample precedent for allowing the erection of the store, and wanted the matter put through in one night.

Ald. Dowling recalled that a similar case last year had been amicably settled through reference of the matter to the board of works, and the city engineer. He considered that the members of the council should acquaint themselves more thoroughly with the location in question before voting.

Ald. Symonds considered that if the question were to be submitted to a committee it should be to the buildings and grounds committee, and not to the board of works. The Mayor explained that it was because the matter rested with the city engineer, who came under the board of works.

The amendment moved by Ald. Dowling, calling for a reference to the board of works, put to the vote, carried.

Board of Works.

In accordance with the request of the County Council, and upon the recommendation of the Board of Works, Ald. English, MacBride and Hollinrake were appointed a committee to meet with the Mayor and the city engineer to discuss the question of suburban roads.

Owing to the illness of Mr. A. J. Wilkes, acting city solicitor, Messrs. Brewster and Heyd will, in accordance with a suggestion embodied in the report of the board of works, be instructed to make application to the board of railway commissioners of Canada for the opening of St. Paul's Avenue by means of a subway under the G.T.R. tracks.

MacBride-Bowley—such a course of action had already been taken.

"Then this body may as well dissolve itself," declared Ald. MacBride, "and place its affairs in the hands of the Mayor, for not one member of the board of works has heard what has been done in the matter. So far as I am concerned, the resolution of the board of works goes."

"I am glad that you are so important a personage," retorted the Mayor.

"I will be here a long time before I am as important as you are," declared Ald. MacBride.

"I know that," commented his Worship. "Further word in this matter will be coming very soon now."

"To you, I suppose?" queried Ald. MacBride.

"To me," assented the Mayor, "as the highest official of the city except Ald. MacBride."

"I am a member of the board of works," replied Ald. MacBride, "and to Ald. English, as chairman of that body, word of this matter should come. There is not the first occasion where we have had reason for dissatisfaction with the work of the city solicitor."

Ald. English explained that owing to the illness of Mr. Wilkes, the matter had laid over until the board of works had decided to take this action.

"You appear to forget that there is such a personage as a mayor in this city," commented his Worship.

"I have the authority to act upon behalf of the Townships of Brantford and South Dumfries in this matter, and have had the application sent in my name in place of that of Mr. Wilkes."

Ald. MacBride submitted that Messrs. Brewster & Heyd had been appointed to act as city solicitor in the case of Mr. Wilkes being unable to act.

Ald. Jones was inclined to approve the action of the Mayor, in accelerating the matter by obtaining a hearing for the case before the Railway Commission. At the same time, Ald. Jones agreed with Ald. MacBride that Mr. Brewster should have been consulted as acting city solicitor.

Ald. Hollinrake foretold a hotly fought battle in the matter, and declared that the city's brief must be in the hands of Brewster & Heyd; the city should be prepared for action, and the motion of the board of works was one of expediency.

Ald. Dr. Wiley desired concerted action in such an important matter as this, and he wished to see Brewster & Heyd co-operating with the Mayor when the hearing of the case took place.

The City Engineer was instructed to advertise storm sewers on Markborough St., from Rawdon to Brock and on Oxford, from Lorne Bridge to Burford St.

Honolulu, March 6.—German merchant steamers taking refuge in this port were under orders of the harbor commission here today to leave their piers and anchor outside the harbor. It was said the order was issued to guard against possible damage to the vessels if they continued to lie at the piers. As the machinery in each of the steamers has been disabled they will have to be towed to their anchorage. In the event of a southerly storm they will be in a dangerous position and in their disabled condition, it is said, they are likely to be lost.

Forced in War in Two Successes

Giants Did That Away Back Pirates Took Charity York's Chance

One of the most important incidents in baseball is when a pitcher forces in the winning run. The base are filled, and the spectators, deep interested and keenly alert, wait the contest between the pitcher and the batter with breathless interest. They are ready to shout at a hit or yell at a strikeout according to the status of the situation, and the angle from which they view the struggle. But whether it is the home team or the visiting team the benefits by the win, the spectators are certain to leave the ground with a disagreeable taste in the mouths, and with a feeling that things are not what they should be.

Forcing in the winning run is a rare performance, but when a team wins two games in succession by this method it must be classed among the most remarkable.

This is what happened on July 1 and 13, 1910, at Pittsburgh, when the Pirates twice won from the New York Giants by this easy process. For the Giants, the result of these games had a most important bearing in the race. Before coming west on their second trip they were regarded as almost sure pennant winners. Then they fell into a slump, from which they did not entirely recover until near the end of the season. They won 12 of their last 17 games and were thus enabled to finish in second place, 15 games behind the Chicago Cubs, who had profited by the slump and practically walked away with the championship.

In the summer of 1910 the Pirates of July 14 the Giants had it all their own way for eight innings. The great Mathewson was on the rubber and there was an awfully big crowd. Only two hits were made off him. Tommie Leach getting a single in the fourth inning, and George Gibson one in the eighth. Only one Pirate had reached first base on the bases by which the Pirates were to win. The game was speedily forced at second. When the Pirates took their last turn at bat, in the ninth inning, the score was 3 to 0 against them. The Giants were a 100-to-1 shot.

Matty being the ninth inning by giving Fred Clarke a base on balls and then there was an awfully big crowd. A fumble by Arthur Delaney put Hans Wagner on base. Hans Hyatt's outplayed Clarke on third and Wagner on second. Two single in succession, by Jack Flynn and Owen Wilson, tallied Clarke and Wagner and brought the score within one run of a tie. On a grounder by George Gibson, Flynn was caught at the plate. Now there were men on third and first, with two out. Matty, to the astonishment of the onlookers, filled the bases by driving Pat O'Connor, pinch hitter for Deacon Phillippe, a pass. Bobby Byrne was also given a base on balls, forcing Wilson across the plate with the run that tied the score.

Then the spectators remembered reading about Matty being afflicted with vertigo. But Big Six held on ground and resolutely faced Tommie Leach, the fifth man to come to bat in the inning, and pitched two balls to him. Both were bad. With the spectators were raising all kinds of hubbub, Matty left the rubber and Leon Ames sprang into his place. Ames promptly sent two more wild ones over the batter's head. With the first, while Gibson jogged home with the winning run. The spectators, to the number of twelve thousand and awed and mystified, scattered to the four winds.

The next day, July 15, not half these spectators returned to the grounds. But the 5,000 who did saw a repetition of the performance of the day before, although some of the sensational features were lacking. The score was tied 7-7 when the Pirates went to bat in the ninth inning. George Wiltz was on the rubber for the Giants at the start of the game, but was forced to retire after the first inning, in which he was hit for a triple and three singles, giving the Pirates three runs. Bugs Raymond followed him, and was so well supported by the Giants especially with their bats, that at the end of the third inning the score was 7 to 5 in favor of his team.

The bats of the Giants damaged the effect of the Pirates' pitching. Nick Maddock and Sam Leever. Both were compelled to retire and make room for Red White, a young man who, in April of this season, had been secured from the Boston National league club in exchange for Sam Frock, pitcher and Bud Sharpe, first baseman. White entered the game in the fourth inning, and not another run did the Giants get. He not only pitched well
