But it makes no difference. Business is not susp only slightly obstructed-and this inconvenience will be more than made up by your having the first peep at our extensive fall importations in the new store.

A Big Store

It is singularly fitting just at this moment, when New York and Toronto are celebrating the opening of newer and better stores, that Brockvills should also be in the procession. To the thoroughness and patriotism of Mr. Newton Cossitt, ably assisted by Mr. Geo. A. Allan, and an efficient staff of workmen under the foremanship of Mr. Wm. Grey, Brockville owes it that she has a store as worthy of her size and progressiveness as any to be found in the metropolis of Canada or of the United States.

"The lake was & mass of white-capped tumbling waves. So tempestuous did the sea become that the majority of the passengers sought refuge on the lower deck. There were a number of women on board, and when the big boat began to roll and toss an spidemic of sea-sickness spread from how to stern. The situation soon became alarming. Mountainous waves rose as high as the upper decks and swept everything before them. The weight of water crashing down the stairways smashed several doors to kindling wood and carried the trunks and valless and heavy boxes from one and of the boat to the other. Some fool yelled that the boat was sinking and for a half hour a scene of wildest panie prevailed. Women ran hither and thither, learing their hair and crying piteously for help. Others dropped on their knees and wildly cried to Heaven for aid. One woman, crazed with fright, ran about offering her money and jewels to anyone who would save herself and children from the awful deeth which she believed was imminent.
