PATERSON'S COUGH DROPS

LAWYERS IN ENGLAND.

The Difference Between the Barrister and the Solicitor.
The barrister in England is the very salt of the earth. He it is who makes the laws, who goes into parliament, who sits on the bench, who considers himself seven or eight degrees higher up in the social scale than any other poor or middle class mortal, and with all this he has absolutely no responsibility toward his clients. That ancient much abused thing called custom in this country has created for the law two separate and distinct limbs, which may be compared in a measure to the life of the bee. One is the drone and the other the queen. The drone is the solicitor, who sits in an office working up a case, consulting clients, drawing bills, controlling estate transactions and controlling the incomes of people who are unfortunate enough to be saddled under the trust deeds. The solicitor, who has his own tradition to work out, does not ever get to himself any glory whatever. Except in police and county court cases, he is persona non grata, or, in the words of the judges, "he is not seen." If he has a case on hand, he is obliged to take it to a barrister, who, though he may never have heard of the matter in dispute before, dons his wig and gown, proceeds into court and argues till all is black and blue, as if he knew all about it, for which he draws a most prodigious fee, quite big enough to enable him to appear nicely mounted in the row every morning. If he spoils the case, there is no chance for redress, because the barrister is merely a gentleman whom fiction positively assumes to be a friend in need. All the onus of failure falls upon the poor solicitor. There are no barristers in prison, but there are a good many solicitors who wear the broad arrow, which is the trademark of his majesty's prisons. The solicitor remains the old time family adviser, to whom all sorts of foolish people bring their trust deeds, their stock certificates, their government bonds and all such documents which have a tendency to lead them into temptation, and that is why all many solicitors, when they need money, find it impossible to resist the desire to take that which is not theirs—London Letter in Town and Country.

BALLOONS IN WARFARE.

Britain at the Hague Conference Opposes Their Use.
The Hague, Aug. 9.—The question of projectiles thrown from balloons has served to show that whereas in 1864, the idea was treated with contempt, to-day the seriousness of the possibilities of practical results are keenly appreciated.
An Italian proposition that steerable balloons must be in the hands of military experts, chosen as the best, received 21 votes, and was referred to the editing committee.
England opposed the idea of aerial warfare. By denouncing on the sea, she is supreme in one direction, but in warfare in the air she added it might easily be possible that she would dominate in only one of the three elements.
A number of Armenian agitators have arrived to memorialize the delegates.

GUELPH MASHER WANTED.

Claimed to Have Taken Horse and Rig to Elora.
Guelph, Aug. 9.—There is a warrant issued for the arrest of the man Ed. Hornbush, who dined on Monday evening with Mrs. Streeter, a fair-haired woman of about 35 years, who left her husband and four children, the eldest only seven years old. The warrant for the arrest is not, however, in connection with the disappearance of the woman's husband, but is on a charge of horse-stealing.
Mrs. Streeter, having hired from Smith's livery at 8 o'clock on Wednesday morning a horse and rig, picked Hornbush up on the outskirts of the city and they disappeared.

GRAVITATION.

Wonderful and Far Reaching Effects Upon the World.

"The effects of gravitation are so familiar as to demand only the briefest mention, yet most of us perhaps seldom stop to consider how far reaching these effects are," says Dr. Henry Smith Williams. "But for gravitation the winds would not blow, the waters would not descend, and the mountains would not crumble into the valleys. Each particle of pulverized rock would remain where it was formed, and there would be no such thing as a mixed soil."

"But as matters are actually arranged gravitation is perpetually active, and every particle of matter is being eternally tugged at and urged to get nearer to the earth's center. So no sooner does a fragment of rock at a mountain crest become loosened than gravitation hurries it crashing down into the valley, shattering it into fragments perhaps or at the least grinding off some portions of its surface as well as of the surface of the rocks against which it is dashed.
"By such means (and with the further aid of its handmaidens, wind and water, gravitation works its incessant purpose of leveling the surface of the earth. In a few brief geological moments it rounds the shoulders of the highest mountain, and, given time enough, it will bring every particle of rock back to the sea bed, whence it originally sprang. Short of that, as a transition stage, it is forever mixing the different soil constituents on the one hand and sorting them out again on the other."—Appleton's.

FINE SPIDER THREADS.

Cultivated Especially For the Use of Astronomers.
The cultivation of certain species of spiders solely for the fine threads which they weave for scientific uses has an important bearing upon astronomy.
No substitute for the spider's thread has yet been found for bisecting the screw of the micrometer used for determining the positions and motions of the stars. Not only because of the remarkable fineness of the threads are they valuable, but because of their durable qualities.
The threads of certain spiders raised for astronomical purposes withstand changes in temperature, so that often in measuring sun spots they are uninjured when the heat is so great that the lenses of the micrometer eyepiece are cracked.
These spider lines are only one-fifth to one-seventh of a thousandth of an inch in diameter, compared with which the threads of the silk worm are large and clumsy.
Each line is made up of several thousands of microscopic streams of fluid. Under the most powerful magnifying glass they appear true and round.
The work of placing these lines in the micrometer requires the delicate touch of experts, who operate with the aid of microscopes which magnify the line a thousand times. The lines are placed parallel with each other and two one-thousandths of an inch apart.

Buying Cooked Food.

In France it is a common thing for the wife to be out at work as well as the husband. From this circumstance, no doubt, have developed the facilities that country affairs for obtaining ready cooked food outside the home. Whole meals can be purchased outside, and they are very good meals too. A whole fowl or a half one or a smaller portion can be bought hot or cold, from the roaster. Soups and salads can be bought in the same way, and in shops where eggs are sold there is always a basket of red eggs as well as white ones, the red color being used to indicate that the eggs are cooked. All these things are sold at prices "within the reach of all," and in many homes scarcely any attempt is made to do cooking.

Belgium Blows Its Horn.

Belgium, like many continental countries, has its national bond of advertising. The state, owning, as it does, the railways, must do everything in its power to increase the passenger traffic, and so England and the adjacent countries are extensively placarded with posters showing Belgium's beauty and pleasure spots. The principal attractions are Ostend and its casino, and the pictorial records of this resort have adorned the boardings of England for many years past.—London Graphic.

Chileans Are Mongrels.

There is a good deal of mongrel about Chilean society. Chileans will tell you that they are descended from old Spanish families, but the old Spanish families were mostly turned out or massacred in the revolution against Spain, which arose mainly out of the wrongs of the mongrels. The descent, in short, usually includes a slave native Indian woman years back, and the two types have mixed well, with handsome, but very fiery results.—Exchange.

Moved Just in Time.

Brookville, Aug. 9.—Fred Loomis, who lives with James Baker in Dexter, made a lucky move between 4 and 5 o'clock Wednesday morning when he concluded it was time for him to get out of bed and go downstairs. A few minutes later Loomis' bed was splintered by lightning. The house was struck, a small portion of the roof torn off, and the rafters and attic floor shattered.

FORECAST OF FASHION.

Vogue of Bordered Materials—Hats—Pins Ornamental and Useful.

Bordered materials are shown in some of the lightest and blindest fabrics. When the border is wide and the design elaborate, the plain plaited skirt is the best model of all, but the narrow borders are frequently cut off and used as headings, bringing about many original and charming effects.

The useful hatpin has come to be used largely as an ornament. Elastic supplies its place in hats which are likely to be harmed by constant pinning. The pin heads are more ornate.

mental than ever, and they are fastened permanently in the bow of ribbon.

Gray ponce petticoats are a good investment, as they wear like iron, wash beautifully, and are light as a feather. A petticoat of ribbon is a novelty. Pompadour ribbon was used in one seen recently. The skirt is in alternate stripes of ribbon and lace insertion.

Many women who think their shirt waist suit is neatly made pay too little attention to the opening at the cuff. Unless this is finished neatly the waist looks slovenly.

Illustrated is a dainty model for a foulard gown of white silk with a green dot. The bodice is trimmed with taffeta overlaid with applique of cream lace, and the chemise is of silk net.
