Shiloh's Consumption cure.

This is beyond question the most successful Cough Medicine we have ever sold, a few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, while its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough we ceaselly ask you to try it. Price 10c., 50c. and $1. If your lungs are sore, chest or back lame, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by E. Lee Street.

Answer This Question

Why do so many people we see around us seem to prefer to suffer and be made miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Coming up of the Food, Yellow Skin, when for 75c. we will sell them Shiloh's Vitalizer, guaranteed to cure them. Sold by E. Lee Street.

MONTREAL, Oct. 28.—The Star cable says:—London, Oct. 28.—The board of agriculture has not yet given a decision regarding the alleged outbreak of pleura pneumonia among Canadian cattle, but Principal Williams and Prof. Owen Williams of the new veterinary college, Edinburgh, report that excreta taken from the animals and examined by them presents all the signs of bronchial pneumonia or cornstalk disease, which is non contagious. In the face of this the board of agriculture will hardly be likely to schedule Canadian cattle.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Oct. 30.—Stewart Hyse, a young man, whom the prosecution in the graveyard insurance case, which comes on for trial before Judge Peters this morning, brought from Philadelphia, is expected to give startling and it is said very strong evidence against the prisoners. Rev. Sidney Welton, it is alleged, offered the accused $500 if he would not come here and give evidence. Hayes was formerly in the employ of C. B. Welton as a clerk in the insurance agency here and about a year ago he left town and was subsequently arrested at the instence of his employer on a charge of stealing funds belonging to Welton. The charge, however, was not investigated and the accused was promptly liberated.

Youths Corner.

HOW HETTY LEARNED CONTENTMENT.

Hetty Bradley was the oldest daughter, and as she lived on a farm there were a great many little things she could do to help her mother, especially now when the girl was away.

One afternoon when she had finished washing the dishes her mother said, 'Now Hetty, Mrs. McLean sent word over yesterday that their harvest apples are ripe and we might have some by going for them, so you may take this basket and get some.'

'May I stay and play awhile with Lizzie?' ask Hetty.

'Yes,' replied her mother, 'I suppose you may. Baby will sleep for a couple of hours, so will need no one to mind him, but be sure to come home to take care of him while I get tea. You may stay till four o'clock but not a minute later, mind.'

'Oh, thank you, mamma,' exclaimed Hetty as she tied on her sun bonnet. Then as she noticed how pale and tired her mother looked she was moved to say:

'How sorry I am that your head aches so. I wish I could cure it.'

'You can help it very much by remembering to do what I ask you. Now, good-bye, and be sure and come home at four.'

Hetty almost flew down the lane and along the road which led to Mrs. McLean's. Two whole hours to talk and play with Lizzie and no baby to mind. How often did Hetty wish she was, like Lizzie McLean, the youngest of the family, and have no bothering babies to care for and scarcely any work to do. When Hetty reached the house she found Lizzie sitting, disconsolately, on the door-step. Her face brightened however, when she saw Hetty coming and she ran gladly to meet her, crying 'Hello Hetty. I'm so glad you've come. Can you stay all afternoon?' I've just been teasing Ma to let me go over to your place but she said you would be too busy, and I would hinder you, and so I am so cross and lonely I did not know what to do. 'I wish our folks had a baby like your little Roy.'

'Oh! you'd get tired of him, too if you had to mind him all holidays instead of playing, like other girls.'

'Why said Lizzie in surprise 'don't you like Roy.'

'O yes, sometimes I like him, but he's such a bother to watch that I often wish we had no baby for then I would have lots of time to play.'

'Well, come on, said Lizzie 'let's play now.' What shall we do.'

'I came over for some apples so I guess we'd better get them first.'

'The girls went into the house and Hetty was pleasantly greeted by Mrs. McLean. 'How is your mamma to day, my dear?'

'O she's pretty well, thank you, only she's got a very bad headache.'

'Poor woman,' said Mrs. McLean 'I wish I could run over and do something for her but I cannot leave my own work to-day.' Just take your basket out to the orchard and Lizzie will help you to fill it. There are lots. You know the tree, Lizzie,—the one with the crooked trunk and low branches.'

So the girls went down to the orchard, and soon filled the basket. Then they gathered their 'pinnies' full of the largest and nicest of the early apples and sat down among the grass to talk and eat. While they were still thus enjoying themselves, they heard voices near and, looking around, they saw two ragged, dirty, strange-looking, children, peering at them through the fence. 'Gypsies!' said Lizzie. There's a whole camp of them down in our meadow. 'Would you like to come down to see them.'

'Wouldn't you be afraid?' said Hetty.

'Oh no! they don't take big girls like us, they only want little babies that they can easily hide. My father was telling me all about them last night, and he says, that they nearly starve the babies and blacken their faces so that if their father found them, he would not know them.'

The girls went up to the two gypsy children and gave them some apples. Then Lizzie who liked to be thought brave said 'Will you take us down to your camp and let us see all your pretty little things that your people sell.'

'Our people are going away, they are all packed up and we've got to hurry or we'll be left,' said one of them and they ran off.

'Come on' said Lizzie 'we'll see their funny wagons any how.'

'But I think its time for me to be going home, I have got to go at four o'clock.'

'Oh well, I guess we'll be back by that time. Anyhow, your mother won't care if you are a few minutes later.'

So they went down through the fields towards the camp though Hetty felt uneasy for fear it would be past four o'clock.

The strange sight of a gypsy camp soon put all other thoughts from her mind, and for over an hour the girls watched in awe the dirty men, the scolding women, the crying children, and the queer looking wagons and tents.

The gypsies were very busy getting ready to move, and took no notice of the girls so that Hetty soon lost all her fear, and the girls went close to the camp. When all was packed the children were put into the queer covered wagons, the women got in with them, the curtains were drawn down, and the wagons moved slowly along the lane, down to the road and out of sight.

Then Hetty thought of her promise to her mother, and began to feel sorry that she had stayed so long.

'Oh Lizzie,' she said, 'I'm sure its past five. Look how low the sun is.'

'Oh no, I don't think so. It doesn't seem long, since you came.'

'Let's hurry, though,' said Hetty. 'I'll get my basket and go straight home, and you can ask your Ma to excuse me for not bidding her goodbye.'

The basket was soon brought from the orchard and Hetty started homeward.

When she got to her own gate she heard the bell ring to call the men in for tea.

'Oh, dear,' thought she! 'Now I've gone and done wrong and mamma will be cross and say I don't try to help her. I wonder why I have such a horrid time and Lizzie has such nice times. If I were in her place I'd be perfectly happy.'

'When she reached the house the family were at tea.

'Well,' said her mamma 'Is this what you call four o'clock. A nice girl you would be to depend on?'

'Oh! mamma, please, I did not mean to be disobedient, but I did not know how quickly the time passed.'

'Well it doesn't matter so much this time for Roy wakened in very good humor and has managed to mind himself, since.'

'Is your head better, mamma?' said Hetty who was very much humbled at this kind of treatment of her disobedience.

'Oh, yes, I had a little nap and slept it all away. But sit down dear, and take your tea, and then hunt Roy up and see that he is not into any mischief. He went out a few minutes ago to watch the cows drinking at the trough,'

When Hetty had finished her meal she went out to find Roy. 'Poor little fellow,' she thought. 'How mean of me to think such unkind things of him, for after all he is the dearest baby in the world.'

When she reached the gate leading to the barn-yard, no Roy was to be seen. 'Perhaps the men have taken him out to the stable with them,' she thought, but when she asked them they said they had not seen him. When she had searched the yard and garden, she went indoors again, thinking he might have gone in to her mother when she was out at the stable; but no, he was not there. Hetty was by this time quite frightened, and her mother joined her in her search.

'Look in the barn-yard,' said Mrs. Bradley, 'he may be out among the cows.'

'But mamma, said Hetty, 'the gate is locked and he could not open it.'

For a long time they looked and called, but no Roy could be found. Then Hetty thought of the gypsies, and her heart stopped beating as she thought of where Roy probably was at that moment. She ran sobbing to her mother and told her about the gypsies she had seen in the afternoon and what Lizzie had told her about them stealing babies. Then Mrs. Bradley too became alarmed.

'Run to the field, Hetty, and tell papa to come home at once.'

Hetty went as quickly as she could. Oh, how gladly she would now have lost all her holidays, and worked for a year, she thought, if she could only see dear little Roy again. And to think he was away with those awful gypsies who would starve and blacken him. By the time she reached the field she was so frightened that she could hardly tell her papa what the matter was. But after questioning her he began to understand what had happened and at once started for the house.

'Oh Papa,' said Hetty, 'If we never find him its all my fault for not coming home when I was told.'

'Do not blame yourself, dear,' said her papa. 'You did not mean to do wrong.'

'Papa,' sobbed Hetty, 'I will never be so thoughtless again, and perhaps God will help us to catch the gypsies and get Roy back again.'

'Oh perhaps they did not get him,' he may be found somewhere about the house.'

By this time they were in sight of the barn-yard gate.

'There is some one standing at the gate, waving something white.'

'What can it mean? Oh do let us hurry papa,' said Hetty though they were both tired out with running.

As they came nearer what do you think they saw? Why there stood mamma and master Roy seated on her shoulder looking as if nothing had happened. Hetty nearly strangled both him and herself with tears, hugs and kisses. As soon as she could speak she said.

'But where did you hide you naughty boy? Mamma, wherever did you find him?'

'Down among the long corn in the garden, lying fast asleep, I guess he was playing little Boy Blue, replied his mother.

'Oh, you, dear dear little Boy Blue, there was never a girl had such a nice baby brother;' and at that moment I don't think Hetty Bradley would have changed places with any girl in the world. Not even Lizzie McLean. Do you?

"August Flower"

Mrs. Sarah M. Black of Seneca, Mo., during the past two years has been affected with Neuralgia of the Head, Stomach and Womb, and writes: "My food did not seem to strengthen me at all and my appetite was very variable. My face was yellow, my head dull, and I had such pains in my left side. In the morning when I got up I would have a flow of mucus in the mouth, and a bad, bitter taste. Sometimes my breath became short, and I had such queer, tumbling, palpitating sensations around the heart. I ached all day under the shoulder blades, in the left side, and down the back of my limbs. It seemed to be worse in the wet, cold weather of Winter and Spring; and whenever the spells came on, my feet and hands would turn cold, and I could get no sleep at all. I tried everywhere, and got no relief before using August Flower Then the change came. It has done me a wonderful deal of good during the time I have taken it and is working a complete cure."

the wagons moved slowly along the lane, down to the road and out of sight.

Then Hetty thought of her promise to her mother, and began to feel sorry that she had stayed so long.

'Oh Lizzie,' she said, 'I'm sure its past five. Look how low the sun is.'

'Oh no, I don't think so. It doesn't seem long, since you came.'

'Let's hurry, though,' said Hetty. 'I'll get my basket and go straight home, and you can ask your Ma to excuse me for not bidding her goodbye.'

The basket was soon brought from the orchard and Hetty started homeward.

When she got to her own gate she heard the bell ring to call the men in for tea.

'Oh, dear,' thought she! 'Now I've gone and done wrong and mamma will be cross and say I don't try to help her. I wonder why I have such a horrid time and Lizzie has such nice times. If I were in her place I'd be perfectly happy.'

'When she reached the house the family were at tea.

'Well,' said her mamma 'Is this what you call four o'clock. A nice girl you would be to depend on?'

'Oh! mamma, please, I did not mean to be disobedient, but I did not know how quickly the time passed.'

'Well it doesn't matter so much this time for Roy wakened in very good humor and has managed to mind himself, since.'

'Is your head better, mamma?' said Hetty who was very much humbled at this kind of treatment of her disobedience.

'Oh, yes, I had a little nap and slept it all away. But sit down dear, and take your tea, and then hunt Roy up and see that he is not into any mischief. He went out a few minutes ago to watch the cows drinking at the trough,'

When Hetty had finished her meal she went out to find Roy. 'Poor little fellow,' she thought. 'How mean of me to think such unkind things of him, for after all he is the dearest baby in the world.'

When she reached the gate leading to the barn-yard, no Roy was to be seen. 'Perhaps the men have taken him out to the stable with them,' she thought, but when she asked them they said they had not seen him. When she had searched the yard and garden, she went indoors again, thinking he might have gone in to her mother when she was out at the stable; but no, he was not there. Hetty was by this time quite frightened, and her mother joined her in her search.

'Look in the barn-yard,' said Mrs. Bradley, 'he may be out among the cows.'

'But mamma, said Hetty, 'the gate is locked and he could not open it.'

For a long time they looked and called, but no Roy could be found. Then Hetty thought of the gypsies, and her heart stopped beating as she thought of where Roy probably was at that moment. She ran sobbing to her mother and told her about the gypsies she had seen in the afternoon and what Lizzie had told her about them stealing babies. Then Mrs. Bradley too became alarmed.

'Run to the field, Hetty, and tell papa to come home at once.'

Hetty went as quickly as she could. Oh, how gladly she would now have lost all her holidays, and worked for a year, she thought, if she could only see dear little Roy again. And to think he was away with those awful gypsies who would starve and blacken

YOUR COUGH

Has not yielded to the various remedies you have been taking. It troubles you day and night, breaks your rest and reduces your strength. Now try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, before the bronchial tubes become enlarged or the delicate tissues of the lungs sustain fatal injury. As an anodyne and expectorant, this preparation has no equal. It soothes the irritated membrane, promotes expectoration, and induces repose. The worst cough by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral Dr. J. G. Gordon, Carrol Co., Va., writes: "I use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice, and pronounce it to be unequaled as a remedy for colds and coughs."

"After the grippe—cough. This was my experience—a hacking, dry cough, with an incessant tickling in the throat, keeping me awake nights, and disturbing the household. I tried a great number of 'cough-cures,' but they gave me only temporary relief. At last I concluded to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and before I had used half a bottle, I had my first all-night sleep. I continued to improve, and now consider myself cured."—A. A. Sherman, Coeymans, N. Y.

By Using

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, many have been saved from fatal illness.

E. D. Estabrooks, Canterbury, N. B., says: "In the winter of 1859 I was a surveyor of lumber in Sacramento, Cal. Being considerably exposed, I took a bad cold accompanied with a terrible cough. I tried several remedies, but they failed to cure me, and it was thought I was going into a decline. On the advice of a friend, I began to use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and less than half a bottle completely cured me."

5TH HALF-YEARLY COMPETITION

The most Interesting Contest ever offered by The Canadian Agriculturist.

One Thousand Dollars in Cash, a Pair of Handsome Shetland Ponies, Carriage and Harness, and over two thousand other valuable prizes for the Agriculturist's brightest readers! Who will have them? According to the usual custom for some years past the publishers of THE AGRICULTURIST now offer their Sixth Half-Yearly Literary Competition. This grand competition will, no doubt, be the most gigantic and successful one ever presented to the people of the United States and Canada.

One Thousand Dollars in cash will be paid to the person sending in the largest list of English words contained in the words "The Canadian Agriculturist."

Five Hundred Dollars in cash will be given to the second largest list. A
