Maimason, the former residence of the Empress Josephine, was sold by auction at Versailles, France, recently to a financial association for £18,120. Malmaison has changed hands many times, having been bought soon after Josephine's death by the mother of the ex-Queen of Spain, who resided there for some years, in 1861. Napoleon III. purchased it for £60,000, and after the fall of the Empire it became the property of the nation. A short time ago a Parisian banker bought it as a speculation, but, becoming bankrupt, the property has been brought to the hammer.
