BY WALTER MALONE

They do me wrong who say I come no more. When once I knock and fall to find you in, For every day I stand outside your door.

Martyrs of Early Canada.

The petition recently presented to the Mayor of the city to be forwarded to the Pope, asking that canonization be conferred on six Jesuit fathers, who, in the early days of Canadian history, sacrificed their lives to their devotion to the spiritual welfare of the savage, has had the effect of once more drawing public attention to those distant days when Canada was in the making.

Hardy couriers des bois, dressed in the spoils of the chase, gallant soldiers of the old regime in gay silks and sweeping plumes, black gowned priests and friars, all filled with the same untiring energy and dauntless courage, crowd the pages of early Canadian history as in the scenes of a romance.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is essential as early as ever since time immemorial. It causes blemishes in the skin, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membranes, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"Two of my children had scrofulous sores which kept growing deeper and kept them from going to school for three months. Ointments and medicines did no good until I began giving them Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine caused the sores to heal, and the children have shown no signs of scrofulous since." J. W. Hodges, Woodstock, Ont.

will rid you of it, radically and permanently, as it has rid thousands.

of those whose organization is now petitioned for, that they consummated their work by giving up their lives at the hands of those to whose spiritual welfare they had devoted their lives.

The names of the Jesuit priest mentioned in the petition for canonization are: de Brebeuf, Daniel, Lalumet, Garnier, Ojabel and Jogues. The names of the friars, Goupil and Lalonde. Of all these the first, Father de Brebeuf, was the most striking figure.

"He was," says Parkman, "the masculine apostle of the faith, the Ajax of the mission." A man of tremendous physical force and endurance, nature had given him all the passions of a vigorous manhood, and religion had crushed them, ordered them, or tamed them to do her work—like a dammed-up torrent, allowed and guided to grind and saw and weave for the good of man.

Each night I burn the records of the day; At sunrise every soul is born again. Laugh like a boy at splendors that have sped, To vanished joys be blind and deaf and dumb;

Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell, Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven!

Do not behold thy lost youth all agast? Do not reel from righteous retribution's blow? Then turn from blotted archives of the past.

Art thou a sinner? Bouse thee from thy spell; Art thou a sinner? Sins may be forgiven; Each morning gives thee wings to flee from hell.

Each night a star to guide thy feet to heaven!

We like best to call SCOTT'S EMULSION a food because it stands so emphatically for perfect nutrition. And yet in the matter of restoring appetite, of giving new strength to the tissues, especially to the nerves, its action is that of a medicine.

made the sign of the cross on the head of a child. This was regarded as an evil spell and in revenge the Indian drove his tomahawk into the head of the religious, who fell dead with the name of the Redeemer on his lips. Jogues, after insupportable adventures and sufferings, finally effected his escape to the Dutch settlement of Manhattan and so on to Europe, whence he returned to Canada, and shortly after met his death in company with the first Lalonde at the hands of the same Mohawks to whom he had gone on a mission.

The Leader of the Opposition. In an elaborate description of the Leaders in the Federal Parliament the correspondent of the Toronto News, independent, has this to say about Mr. Borden:

"Mr. Borden has gained. His hold on his party is increasing in firmness, his attack has improved in vigor and point, and he seems to have got the ear of the public. He has enhanced his high reputation as a parliamentary lawyer by his success in the duel which Mr. Aylesworth deliberately challenged him. More important, he has advanced in astuteness and leadership. His conduct of the situation created by the government's decision to put the Lord's Day legislation through was a very pretty piece of handling. He has been charged with jactance on this subject as a politician. This accusation, whatever it is worth, the Government must share. Had politics, the hope that passing the bill would strengthen it, nothing to do with his decision to take the matter up."

Had politics, the hope that passing the bill would strengthen it, nothing to do with his decision to take the matter up. Had politics, the hope that passing the bill would strengthen it, nothing to do with his decision to take the matter up.

"Mr. Borden at the outset took the ground that the situation with all its difficulties, belonged to the Government and that it should be left to make the best of it. As the discussion went on the opposition to the measure came nearly altogether from the Liberal side; almost the only Conservative who did much criticism was Mr. Pringle, who pushed faithfulness to railway interests to the verge of party disloyalty. At the same time Mr. Borden and other Conservatives gave a good deal of assistance in the drafting of the individual clauses of the measure. Finally when the situation under the guidance of the Government unhampered by Opposition interference had drifted into a muddle, Mr. Borden offered his solution. Perhaps he had profited by observation of the difficulties into which the Government had fallen; at all events it was the best general scheme for Dominion legislation which has yet been proposed. The annoyance showed by his opponents was a proof of the effectiveness of his handling of the situation."

ICR Train Derailed. The Sydney Exr bound for Halifax left the rails two miles east of Merigomish on Saturday the 4th, and there was a bad smash-up which fortunately and almost miraculously was without loss of life.

The train was a little behind time and was proceeding at extremely rapid speed when the accident happened. The train for some time had been swaying so much that dishes were thrown off the tables in the dining car and passengers were the best of their concern. One man on his way to Halifax leaped over and said to a fellow passenger:

"I don't like this speed particularly in this section where an accident had happened a week ago and in a section where many mishaps have occurred. It was not more than 15 minutes afterwards when there was a sudden and heavy jar, caused by the engine leaving the rails, the news agent was sitting on the rear of the parlor car and was pitched head foremost to the ground. He was wearing a service cap and the sword was out of it by the fall as if with a knife but the chap was unhurt. The hard band of the cap saved him."

The train plunged on for more than 300 yards with the engine off the rails tearing through the sleepers and the earth and at last fell over the slight embankment and across the ditch on its side. The baggage car swung over to the other side. The fireman and the driver had a very close call, but they stuck to their post till the last, fortunately being able to spring clear of the locomotive just as it crashed over. The passenger cars kept the rails and no one was hurt.

Word was sent by messenger to Merigomish the nearest telegraph office, but that was two miles distant and caused a loss of half an hour. It took about one and a half hours for the relief train to make the run back, but the passengers were kept there four hours. They were a very indignant crowd of men and women at this delay of two hours more than what seemed necessary, and when at last a train to take them along arrived from Stellarton they felt the almost any of them could have done quicker work. It does seem to have been a long delay, but perhaps the railway people presuming on the fine weather made haste slowly in coming to the rescue.

A more serious complaint than this is the frequency of accidents on this particular section, and that an excessive speed should be maintained over it. Accident follows accident and if they continue much longer this part of the I.C.R. will become a by-word. If the road is not what it should be then let it be made right and till it is put into shape let the train speed be moderated. It may be that an ample explanation can be furnished by the officials.

Another form of worry is the tendency to brood over past errors. The business man, or the public man, is suddenly overwhelmed with the conviction that he has made an awful mess of things. The worst of all calamities is the lack of energy to grapple with calamity, and in most cases it is worry that breaks down a man's energy.

A third, and perhaps a more common worry, is the gloomy anticipation of future calamities. There are some men who, however happy they may be to-day, are perpetually frightening themselves with the possibilities of a disastrous tomorrow. They live in terror. When actual sorrow comes upon us, most of us discover unexpected resources of fortitude in ourselves. But nothing sickens the heart so much as imagined sorrow. Of this form of worry we may well say, 'It's wicked!'

MISCELLANEOUS

The Modern Lochinvar

When young Lochinvar rode out from the West, He claimed that his automobile was the best; It was painted dark red and it brilliantly shone.

He went like a streak and he rode all alone; He shot over ruts with a zipp and a jar, And people fled madly from young Lochinvar.

With a whirl of his wheels and a hum of his cogs He knocked down the children and ran over dogs; He frightened the horses and laughed at their pranks, And men who got angry he looked on as cranks;

He gave her the very last notch on the bar, And a cloud of dust followed the gay Lochinvar. He stayed not at bridges, he stopped not for stone, He calmly took all of the roads as his own.

Till he came to a crossing and smashed through a gate And endeavored to butt through a trainload of freight— They searched and at last, lying under a car, They found a few chunks of the bold Lochinvar.

Sick With Worms.

Mrs J D Mayo, South Stukely, P. Q., wrote the following: "One of my children took sick with worms and after trying everything without getting relief we procured Dr. Low's Worm Syrup which acted promptly and effectually."

At a recent school examination the following was asked:—"Where in the British Isles was the first electric tramcar run?" "On the rails," came the quick response of a small boy.

Doctor the Horses.

Mrs Thos Thompson, Roland, Man, writes: "My husband would not be without Hagar's Yellow Oil in the house, as he uses it a good deal for doctoring up the horses and considers it splendid." Price 25c.

Customer.—Really, now, are these eggs fresh? Grocer.—Madam, if you will kindly step to the telephone and call up our farm you can hear the hens that laid those eggs still cackling.

Minard's Liniment Cures Dandruff. "Now," said the fussy old gentleman, putting one of the biggest plums in his mouth and picking up another, "what is the sense of having that notice read, 'French plums for sale?' Don't you see that 'French plums' would be enough? Don't you suppose that everybody knows they are for sale?" "I dunno," answered the grocer; "some folks seem to think I'm giving them away."

And the old gentleman put back in the box the second plum he was taking.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS

Dyspepsia, Bolls, Pimples, Headaches, Constipation, Loss of Appetite, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, and all troubles arising from the Stomach, Liver, Bowels or Blood.

Mrs. A. Lathrop, of Saltford, Ont., writes: "I believe I would have been in my grave long ago had it not been for Burdock Blood Bitters. I was run down to such an extent that I could scarcely move about the house. I was subject to severe headaches, backaches and dizziness. I tried many remedies, but they did me no good. I then bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and after using it for a few days, I found my health fully restored. I can truly recommend it to all who are afflicted with any of the above troubles."
