Some exchanges have unearthed another swindle, and the farmer is the victim. This time a fellow comes along driving a shiping rig, and sells carpet the same grown from the unprepared seed are fill—grown from the grown from t ed with bugs, while those grown from the seed which had been soaked in coal oil are entirely free from the pest. This is a very fair test, and shows pretty conclusively the validity of the experiment. The pea crop is a most important one to our farmers, and for years has been regularly destroyed by the bug, and if the loss can be avoided by such simple means a great benefit will have been accomplished.—[Seaforth Expositor.
