are two weeks ahead of their attack ing schedule, according to a cablegram received here to-day by Secretary Balfour from the Foreign Office. The advance, it said, has been much faster than expected and losses smaller. The losses were said to be only one-half as large proportionately, as those on the Somme offensive last year. This is attributed by the nembers of the mission to an incomparably better artillery preparation and the fact that the men are not allowed to outrun the guns.
