Professor Petrie bases his opinion on the disappearance of a gas which is poisonous to man, yet essential to his life. The earth started with great bulks of free carbolic acid in its atmosphere. When green plants, which live on carbonic acid, came into existence, they began absorbing it and giving out oxygen, thus making life possible for breathing animals. The latter reverse the process and return carbonic acid for oxygen received, but continuous with this process, the carbonic acid is being slowly but steadily absorbed by the decomposition of silicates, and the action is sufficiently rapid and widespread, Professor Petrie calculates. to absorb all the carbonic acid of the atmosphere within two hundred thousand years. Territorial life would gradually cease long before the final disappearance of the gas. Drought, Flood or Cold.

How Will the World End

Renewed interest is being taken just now in the possible fate which may befall the world and bring to an end life on this planet.

According to Professor Flinders

Petrie the famous Egyptologist, man and other animals have only another

two hundred thousand years of existence on the earth. This may seem quite long enough, and nothing to worry about, comments a scientific journal, but it must be remembered man's past experience has lasted for probably twice that period, and organic life has a past running into

A French scientist, M. Martel, gives us a much shorter existence. We needn't worry about lack of carbonic acid two hundred thousand years hence, for in two hundred years the world will be dying of thirst. M. Martel declares, from his investigation of the earth's surface, that the water level is steadly falling, and unless we can discover how to prevent it, our great-grandchildren will be hard put to it to find water and will be in the same state that Professor Lowell believed exists on Mars. Parts : of South Africa are, it was recently reported, becoming uninhabitable because the water supplies are gradually failing; and a few years ago a European geologist announced that Europe was drying up-hundreds of Buropean lakes had entirely disanpeared, he declared, in the last two centuries.

On the other hand a more famous geologist, Sir Archibald Geikie, foresees that man will be drowned out of the earth, owing to too much water. He says that the surface of the earth is decaying at such a rate that in a "comparatively short period" most of the dry land will be reduced to the level of the sea and there will be a second deluge. But to a geologist "a comparatively short period" may mean anything up to half a million years.

The fate usually predicted for us by scientists is either freezing to death-another glacial epoch, or the gradual cooling of the sun, or the "dving" of the earth as the moon has died-or being burnt to ashes, consumed in the intense heat of a collision with a comet or other astral body. The gradual cooling of the sun to a point where its heat radiations would no longer suffice for our existence is now, since the discovery of radium, such a very distant danger that it is difficult to take an interest in it, and it will be a "comparatively long time" (geologically) before the earth is as dead and cold as the moon. As for another Ice Age, present evidence is against its being an immediate danger. It is true that in the north it is believed the region of perpetual ice and snow is gradually extending southwards, but in the Antarctic the data collected by the Scott and Shackleton expeditions show that the southern icecap is shrinking and that new habitable lands are being opened up.

Advertising Boosts Trade.

Let the space buyer play fair-be reasonable with the publisher. If you want to suck the blood out of business, starve the press. If you want to put out the fires under the boiler of your own industry, stop your advertising. If you want to cripple the express, the postal, the freight and the railroad service of the country, stop your advertising. If you want to dull the intellect, cease to educate the buying population of your country and spread pessimism, then withhold your patronage from the press.

On the other hand, if you want to see the glorious sunshine of business prosperity throughout the length and breadth of this land, jump to the front with the determination to do your part in its promotion. The surest way you can do that is by giving the publisher what is necessary in advertising patronage, and at a profitable rate, thus enabling him to put forth an optimistic, confidence-inspiring and trade-building enthusiasm that will compel business development.—Ex.
