

A Transformation.

"You needn't be uneasy," says Terry, marking a contemptuous little moue. "He is not so easily upset as you seem to think. He will stick his glass in his eye, regard me critically for a moment, and say, 'White becomes you! That will be all.'"

"I think you are a little unfair to him," says Fanny. She studies the girl with some anxiety. "What is his fault?" she asks. "Is he not kind, thoughtful? Was there ever a more attentive lover? Does he ever find fault with you?"

"He does nothing but find fault with me. He—'with a sudden burst of anger, long restrained—'he disapproves of me.'"

"Nonsense, Terry! What has he said to you, to make you come to such an extraordinary conclusion?"

"Nothing. Nothing at all," indignantly. "That is the worst of it. If he would say something, I could forgive him. But he only thinks, and thinks, and looks, and looks. I passionately, 'can't bear it. If he would only once get really speech with me—say something dreadful—speak at me—I could like him better. I could at all events gloomily, 'understand him.'"

"My dear Terry!"

"But he won't," says Terry, with dreary conviction. "I'm sure he thinks it isn't a respectable thing for a man to say—"

"Cross words?" suggests Fanny, gravely. She is secretly amused with mirth.

"No," frowning. "Cross words to a woman."

"Perhaps experience has taught him that there is little to be gained by them—that they bring in, as a rule, more kicks than 'pence,'" says Fanny, with a speech in a model of propriety in the drawing-room, but who can give herself away very considerably in her bedroom. "And so all you have to object to in Gerrard is that he won't swear at you?"

"Oh! If you can't be sober!"

"My dear girl, I haven't touched a drop of tea since—"

Terry abruptly leaves the room, angered the more by the notion of Fanny's suppressed laughter, that seems to echo down the corridor behind her.

If Mrs. Adams had meant to advocate her sense of humor, she has certainly failed. It is with an ever-increasing anger against Trefusis—against the man she has promised to marry—that Terry runs down the stairs and straight to the library.

On the threshold she pauses, standing behind the velvet portieres as if half afraid to draw them aside.

Is any one down before her? Suddenly she draws the curtains, and, holding one in each hand, she looks up. Standing so, she makes a charming picture—a picture of all white, white silk and lace, and a grace most indescribable, a beauty rare, a sweetness and perfection not to be surpassed. So she stands looking in, her white gown framed on either side by the rich red of the velvet hangings. Her lovely face, lit by happy expectation, is brilliant, her whole air almost tremulous with delight. To the two gazing back at her she seems like the incarnation of youth and light and love.

My only joy and dearie, O.
Thy neck is like the dew-drop
Upon the banks so briery, O.

Thy teeth are of the ivory;
Oh sweetest, the twinkle of thine eye!
Nae joy, nae pleasure blinks on me,
My only joy and dearie, O.

To the two looking back at her she is certainly their "dear O." Seated there, she makes a step forward, letting the curtains swing behind her. Larry is the first to move; Trefusis stands silent, his eyes fixed on her. He had not anticipated, perhaps, the Irishman's impetuosity, and besides, he would not have stirred if he could. He is content to gaze and gaze. It is as though he is looking at her for the first time; she seems to him a revelation, and indeed in a sense she is, and not without reason. In her very shabbiest frock he had always thought her the prettiest girl he had ever seen, but he had not known how beautiful she could be!

"Oh, I say! How awfully pretty you look!" says Larry, in his boyish way. He catches her hand and draws her into the center of the room, under the big chandelier, from which many wax candles cast their gleams upon her, as if in love with her. "Is that the dress the old Demon gave you? If so, I forgive her a lot of her sins!"

"You like me," asks Terry, gayly. She is feeling a little shy, a little vain, perhaps, a little angry. Trefusis says a word.

"Oh, I love you," says Larry, with a rather forced tone. "You will give me a dance, won't you? I ask in a hurry, as I see," shaking his head with a mixture of despair and pride in her. "Your eyes will be full five seconds after you enter the dancing room."

"A dance? Any dance?" says Terry, quickly, smiling charmingly at him. She has never glanced at Trefusis since that first quick look she gave him on her entrance; and indeed so far as she concerns herself with him now, he might as well not be in the room—perhaps better.

"Will you have the first waltz?"

"The first?" repeats Larry, with a little stammer. "But that is a rather uncomfortable glance at Trefusis, who is looking perfectly placid and unconcerned, 'is promised, of course.'"

"No, it isn't," shaking her charming head. "Strange as it may seem to you, not a soul has asked me to say this in Trefusis's hearing. For the last two days he and I have been dancing, and in a way had given her to understand that this and that dance should be his. But he had not directly asked her for the first, and this had nettled her. He had made so sure. She was his property, it seemed, and she was to keep open her card for him. 'Won't you have it?' she asks. She gives Larry a distinctly coquettish glance from under her long dark lashes.

"Thank you," says O'More—a little gravely, however.

Terry looks back over her left shoulder to admire the train behind her.

"So you like my dress?" says she to Larry.

"Oh, like it!" says that young man, ecstatically. "It is perfect; and so are you."

Terry turns her eyes slowly at last on Trefusis. His silence has irritated her into speech.

"And you?" she asks. "What do you think of it?" There is defiance in her air. Trefusis regards her calmly for a moment or two, then lets his gaze travel over her gown in a slow, unburied fashion.

"It suits you very well," he says indifferently.

Terry turns away from him, bitterly affronted. She is angry, however, as she turns. Such a cold answer, after all dear Larry's loving admiration! What a fool!

she must be, to fancy at times that he is in love with her!

She runs quickly to a long mirror, and stares at the charming reflection therein, a reflection with a considerably heightened color and flashing eyes. This replica of her pretty self she regards with studied approval for a while.

You are right," says she, nodding her head gayly at herself. "It does suit me. But, Larry, what about this sleeve! Isn't the ribbon a little high, eh? Come here and look."

Larry rushes to her.

"A little, perhaps," says he. If there can be a fault anywhere, it is there. Shall I flatten it a bit?"

"Yes, but take care."

"Now, patting the ribbon anxiously, though to Trefusis, looking impudently on it, it seems that he is patting the pretty childish shoulder only, 'will that do?' There!" standing back to admire her sleek. "You are, if possible, half an inch lovelier than you were a moment ago. I assure you, Terry, you didn't want to touch. You, tenderly, 'would take the shine out of the lot of them, even if you were dressed in that old black gown of yours. As it is, I tremble for the consequences. To-night will draw tears of blood from—"

"Nonsense!" interrupts Miss O'More, lightly. "You rave! Here, fasten my bonnet. You seem to have nothing to do but talk nonsense; and these buttons will help you through your time." She laughs merrily, and holds out to him her slender hand.

"Remarkable Cure of Dropsy and Dyspepsia."—Mr. Samuel T. Casey, Belleville, writes: "In the spring of 1881 I began to be troubled with dyspepsia, which gradually became more and more distressing. I used various domestic remedies and applied to my family physician, but received no benefit. By this time my trouble assumed the form of dropsy. I was unable to use any food whatever except boiled milk and bread; my limbs were swollen to twice their natural size; all hopes of my recovery were given up, and I quite expected death within a few weeks. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery having been recommended to me, I tried a bottle with but little hope of relief, and now, after using eight bottles, my Dyspepsia and Dropsy are cured. Although now 79 years of age I can enjoy my meals as well as ever, and my general health is good. I am well-known in this section of Canada, having lived here 57 years; and you have liberty to use my name in recommendation of your Vegetable Discovery, which has done such wonders in my case."

CHASE'S CHAPTER

1. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a combination of valuable medicines in concentrated form as prepared by the eminent Physician and Author, Dr. A. W. Chase, with a view to not only be an unfailing remedy for Kidney and Liver troubles, but also tone the Stomach and purify the Blood, at a cost that is within the reach of all. The superior merit of these pills is established beyond question by the praise of thousands who use them—one Fill a dose, one box 25 cents.

2. When there is a Pain or Ache in the Back the Kidneys are speaking of trouble that will ever increase unless relieved. We have the reliable statement of L. B. Johnson, Holland Landing, who says: "I had a constant Back-Ache, my back felt cold all the time, my appetite poor, stomach sour and belching, urine scalding, had to get up 3 or 4 times during night to urinate, commenced taking one Kidney-Liver Pill a day; Back-Ache stopped in 48 hours, appetite returned, and able to enjoy a good meal and a good night's sleep; they cured me."

3. Constipation often exists with Kidney trouble, in such a case there is no medicine that will effect a permanent cure except Chase's combined Kidney-Liver Pills, one 25 cent box will do more good than dollars and dollars worth of any other preparation, this is endorsed by D. Thompson, Holland Landing, Ont.

4. "Tribly" has an admirable setting in Harper's Magazine for July. The entire number is interesting, with a beginning of a serial by Charles Dudley Warner, the continuation of Mr. Howell's account of his first visit to New England, the semi-scientific and wholly interesting articles on gun making and "The Storage Battery of the Air," the short stories and the excellent illustrations. Some of these are by Mr. C. D. Gibson, who has turned from Paris with an enlarged collection of types at his disposal.

"Beautiful Joe," an autobiography by Marshall Saunders. It is something of a surprise to hear that the Baptist Publishing Society has sold 13,000 copies of a book in three months or so, and has only just begun the campaign. "Beautiful Joe" is the book, the autobiography of a dog somewhat in the style of "Black Beauty."

The story was awarded the prize by the New England Humane Society, and every reader will approve the decision of the judges. Its issue by a Toronto house calls for an additional word. In binding and typography it is a credit to Canada. A feature of the edition is the fac-simile of a four-page letter in the handwriting of Lady Aberdeen, inserted after the preface, in which her Ladyship congratulates the publishers on their intention to publish a Canadian edition of "Beautiful Joe," speaks in very high terms of the book from a literary and humanitarian standpoint, and closes with the remark that "Canada has every reason to be proud that one of her daughters should prove herself so able a champion of the claims of the faithful creatures which so constantly minister to our wants and pleasures."

Undoubtedly the story is a good one, and one which must give strong impetus to the many movements of the present day which seek to shield the brute creation from cruelty and brutality.

[Baptist Book Room, 9 Richmond street west, Toronto, and of Jas. I. Anderson & Co., London.]

The ex-Empress Eugenie has been engaged on her memoirs for many years. As soon as a page is written it is placed under lock and key, and not even her most intimate friends ever see it. The work is not to be published until 25 years after her death. The ex-empress uses in writing a penholder which is ornamented with diamonds. It was used by the fourteen representatives in signing the treaty of the peace of Paris in 1856, and was given to the ex-empress as a memento.

The Cosmopolitan for July contains Mrs. John Sherwood's article on "Beauty," which she has been for some time carefully preparing. The illustrations are disappointing and the article shows few signs of the care spent upon its composition. The Cosmopolitan publishes three chatty reviews: the itching and bleeding, the Gettysburg month; Carl Lunkhult takes us to Mexico, to the Tarahumara cave dwellers; Mr. W. H. Shelton's story, "A Man With a Memory," adds picturesque to the description of the diary, and Prof. Shaler describes the beasts of burden. There are an essay by Agnes Repplier, poems by Anne Mayo Maclean, M. L. Van Vorst, and Graham Tomson; a story by John J. a-Beckett, and a discussion of the New York tenement house evil, with a suggestion for its cure, by Ernest Flagg, an architect who is qualified to write on the subject.

Letters of Edgar Allan Poe which were discovered by W. M. Griswold, of Cambridge, among the papers of his father, Dr. Rufus Griswold, Poe's biographer, are to be edited by Professor George E. Woodberry and to be published for the first time in the Century. They will appear in three parts, relating separately to Poe's life in Richmond, Philadelphia and New York.

WOMAN'S NEED

Women suffer unspeakable tortures from muscular weakness, caused by impure nerves and poor blood. Uric Kidney acid poisons the blood. By and by, if the Kidneys do not properly purify the blood, then comes prostratus, retroversion, etc. Blood 75 per cent, pure is not a nourisher—it is a death breeder. Delicate women need not be told how much they would give to get and STAY well. If their blood is free from the poisonous ferments of the Kidneys and Liver, they will never know what "weakness" is. The blood is the source and sustainer of health. It cannot be kept pure except the Kidneys and Liver do their work naturally. Something is needed to insure free and natural action of these organs, one 25 cent box of Kidney-Liver Pills will prove to any sufferer they are a boon to women, can be used with perfect confidence by those of delicate constitution.

One Kidney-Liver Pill taken weekly will effectually neutralize the formation of Uric Acid in the blood and prevent any tendency to Bright's Disease or Diabetes.

For purifying the blood and renovating the system, especially in the Spring, one 25 cent box is equal to $10 worth of any Sarsaparilla or Bitters known. Sold by all dealers, or by mail on receipt of price, EDMANSON, BATES & CO., 45 Lombard Street, Toronto.
