

TAKING A FRIEND'S ADVICE.

MR. THOMAS ADAMS TELLS THE HAPPY RESULT THAT FOLLOWED.

He was suffering from a severe attack of Rheumatism—would have given anything to secure relief—how a Cure Was Brought About.

From The Bradford Courier.
A brief statement in respect to the recovery of Mr. Thomas Adams of St. George's will no doubt be of considerable interest to suffering humanity in general and particularly to those who may profit somewhat by the experience hereafter set forth. Mr. Adams is a stonemason by trade and resides about a mile east of St. George's. At present he is operating the Pattern Mills and is well known and respected in the neighborhood. In order to gain all the information possible concerning the circumstances of the cure, a representative of The Courier proceeded thither to investigate the case. Mr. Adams was found at work in his mill. He is a man of about thirty-five, healthy and vigorous, a man whom one would not suspect of having had any ailment. When interviewed he cheerfully made the following statement: "About three years ago when at work at my trade I contracted, through over-exposure, a severe attack of muscular rheumatism, which confined me to the house for three weeks, during which time I suffered the most excruciating pain, being hardly able to move. I was so bad that I could not lie down, had to just let myself fall into bed. When attempting to rise I had to turn over upon my face and crawl up, there being only one position from which it was possible to rise. I would have given anything at this time in order to secure relief. My first thought was to call in a regular practitioner, so I procured one of the best physicians in the neighborhood, but he did not seem to get control of the malady. After treating me for some time he left it to my own hands, saying he could do nothing for me. About this time a friend of mine persuaded me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Finally I decided to give them a trial. I soon experienced a decided improvement and was enabled to get around by the use of a crutch. After the further use of the Pink Pills I was so far recovered as to be able to resume work and since that time have been free from the complaint. I do not now feel any of the soreness and stiffness of the joints. I can get right up in the morning and go off to work without any feeling of weakness whatever. I have confidence in Pink Pills and heartily recommend them. I believe them a good thing to take at any time to get the blood into good condition and if I felt any illness coming on I would, instead of seeing a doctor, send at once for a box of Pink Pills."

When strong tributes as these can be had to the wonderful merits of Pink Pills, it is little wonder that their sales reach such enormous proportions, and that they are the favorite remedy with all classes. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unequalled specific for rheumatism, neuralgia, headache, after effects of grippe, partial paralysis, St. Vitus dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous prostration, indigestion, irregularity of menstruation, all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppression, irregularity, and all forms of weakness. In men they object a radical cure in all troubles arising from mental worry, overwork, or excess of any nature.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are manufactured by Dr. J. C. Williams, Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and Sold in boxes of 50c and $1.00 by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations of this valuable medicine. A box of six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company at either address.

Gladstone's Bismarckism.
Mr. Gladstone, says The Westminster Gazette, is passing into a stage of genial Bismarckism—Bismarckism without Bismarck's quarrel with the world or his habit of rounding upon old friends and exploding at his successors in office. But Mr. Gladstone, we hope, will at least continue so far to imitate the ex-Chancellor as to make frequent appearances among his neighbors, dropping words of advice, reprimand and mild wisdom de robus omnibus et quibusdam aliis. Some of his friends a few years ago were apprehensive that he would suffer not from the wear and tear of Parliamentary life, but from the reaction which, should it follow, when he returned to his roses and his neighbors. The Liberal Association is still apparently determined that he shall not suffer from ennui, and so far, we dare say, they do him no disservice.

Napoleon on Love.
"M. Frederic Masson, says the Paris correspondent of The London News, is about to publish a long dialogue on "Love," written by Bonaparte at Valence, when he was serving there in 1794, as a lieutenant of artillery. It is somewhat commonplace supposed dialogue between the writer and a college friend, Des Mazis. The latter begins: "You ask, monsieur, what is love? Do you mean that you are not made of the same stuff as other men?" Bonaparte—"I do not ask you for a definition of love. I was formerly in love, and I remember what it is well enough not to need any of those metaphysical definitions which only confuse. I do more than deny its existence. I believe it injurious to society, and the happiness of individual men. Finally I believe that love is an evil, and that it would be a blessing if the world were entirely devoid of it. Do not misjudge your friend. Do not regard me with indignation, but answer me. Why is it that since this passion overmasters you one no longer meets you in society? You neglect your business, you neglect your parents in monotonous solitary rambles, and you mope about until you have an opportunity of seeing Adelaide." Des Mazis retorts: "What stuff you talk! To be candid, you make me hate you."

Bonaparte in return delivers himself of a long tirade to show that love is a curse; that there is no more fatal misdeed than that it is death to friendship, to reason; that it kills the sense of duty, that it is selfishness in disguise, a horrible tyrant, and the worst slavery.

STRANGLER WITH A WINDOW CORD

A Lunatic's Cunning Device to Obtain the Means by Which He Could End His Life.

C. R. Pears, aged 30, an inmate of the Toronto Insane Asylum, whose relatives reside at Uxbridge, was found hanging from a window in the east ward, strangled to death by the cord which he had fastened around his neck, with the weights attached, and he had pulled it off, and drawing out the lower portion of the frame, got hold of the rope, which, when the window opened, raised and lowered the window. Without cutting this rope or pulling it off he placed his head in the loop and letting his body fall back strangled himself.

Dr. Lynd decided that an inquest was unnecessary. During the excitement another inmate managed to escape, but was captured hiding behind a fence at Queen's wharf.

Run With Sea Turtles

"I am reminded," said an old coasting captain, "of an experience I once had with sea turtles on the edge of the gulf stream, about 80 miles from Hatteras. I was part owner and captain of the Mary Lytle at that time and was coming up from Savannah with a half cargo of rice, when one morning the cookout yelled to me to come up on deck and look at the sea turtles. When I got up and looked over the rail, the whole ocean, as far as I could see ahead of us, was covered with turtles. They were tremendous fellows and were paddling along lazily in the opposite direction to that in which we were going. It didn't take us long to rig up a windlass and tackle and begin pulling some of the old fellows aboard. We picked the biggest, as they came, and in the course of three hours we had caught 20, about all that we could handle. The shells of one that weighed 470 pounds is now in front of an eating house on Houston street, New York. I would hate to say how many turtles were in sight of the Mary Lytle that day for fear somebody might think I was fish yarning, but they came by us steadily for five hours, and when we got well into the school it extended as far as the eye could reach on all sides, and there was a turtle to about every 40 square feet of water, and I didn't see one that weighed less than 150 pounds."—Washington Star.

Wire Wound Pipe

An important change is to be noted in engineering practice—namely, that of winding steam pipes over 8 inches in diameter with three-sixteenths inch copper wire, thus nearly doubling the bursting pressure, in the case of merchant steamers using high pressure steam. It is found that with the wire wound gun, wire of square section coiled round the pipe under tension adds enormously to the strength, and the results of some tests have showed that a wire pipe stands just above the pressure it ought to have stood when unwound. To obviate the risks of careless brazing and enable the thickness of sheet copper forming the pipe to be reduced to a minimum, at the same time that full advantages of wire winding is secured, an improved system of manufacturing steam pipes has been devised—forming even a closer analogy to the wire gun than the usual system of wire winding—and consists in using copper of the thinnest practicable gauge to form the interior of the pipe. The body of the pipe proper is composed of steel wire wound closely around the core, the interstices being filled in solid with copper by a new system of copper electro deposition.—New York Sun.

Six Cameras in One

The astronomers and observers in general have noted and recorded many oddities among the various comets or "hoary stars" that have made their appearance in the heavens. That of the year 1102, known as "Metia's comet," was in the form of a plow, but without anything resembling handles. The crook near the "moldboard" finally elongated until the celestial wanderer stretched out in a V shape until it looked like a flock of geese. Josephus says that the comet of the year 70 A.D. was in the shape of a sword, and that it "hung over the city of Jerusalem" a whole year. The comet of 1321 looked like the flukes of an immense whale, the resemblance being so strong that it went into the histories of several widely separated countries as the "whale comet." Donati's comet, when first seen on June 2, 1858, was in the shape of a tadpole. On Oct. 8 it was sword shaped, and six days later was a counterpane of the wings of a gigantic bird.—St. Louis Republic.

An Athlete's Garmets.
The dude moved softly into the haberdasher's place of business and ranged himself along in front of a clerk. "I want to purchase a persipier," he said in a low, like voice. "A what?" asked the clerk letting his chin drop. "A persipier," repeated the dude; "one of those," he added pointing to what he wanted. "Oh," apologized the clerk, "you mean a sweater," and he raised the price 50 per cent. on him.

Some persons have periodical attacks of constipation, cholera, dysentery or diarrhea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and taking fruit is sure to bring on the attack. To avoid such troubles we recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Bismarck Corn Cereal as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.
