The End of the World WHAT A FRENCH SCIENTIST HAS TO SAY ON

Correspondance Scientifique regarding his surplice, and, leaping over the rail the ultimate fate of our globe:—

ing, struck out at Mr. Roaring Bill in a the ultimate fate of our globe:

"The earth was born; she will die. She will die either of old age, when her vital elements shall have been used up, or through the extinction of the sun, to whose rays her life is suspended. She might also die by accident, through collision with some celestial body meeting her on her route, but this end of the world is the most improbable of all.

"She may, we repeat, die a natural death through the slow absorption of her vital elements. In fact, it is probable of all probable of all probable of global and alternately encouraged each combatant with such inspiriting remarks as 'Now, then, Bill, bust him in the eye,' or 'Hooray, Parson, the eyes of the church is on you! Back up your religion like a little man! The eager spectators swarmed into the church and fought for good positions in the pulpit. The betting at first was on the the ultimate fate of our globe :of ages to come, the epoch, yet afar off, in which the earth, deprived of the at tween her and her religion. burg, Berlin, London, Paris, Vienna Constantinople and Rome, will fall asleep in succession under their eternal shroud. During very many ages equatorial humanity will undertake Arctic expeditions to find again under the ice the place of Paris, Lyons, Bordeaux and Marseilles. The sea coasts will have changed and the geographical map of the earth will have been transformed. No one will live and breathe any more except in the equatorial zone up to the day when the last family. nearly dead with cold and hunger, will sit on the shore of the last sea in the rays of the sun which will thereafter shine here below on an ambulent tomb revolving aimlessly around a useless light and a barren heat."

For the Last Time.

There is a touch of pathos about doing even the simplest thing "for the last time." It is not alone kissing the dart time. It is not alone kissing the last time. It is not alone kissing the last time upon some scene you have looked your last time upon some scene you have loved—when you stand in some quiet vity street where you know you will never stand again. The actor, playing his part for the last time: the singer, whose voice is cracked hopelessly, and who after this once will never stand before the sea of upturned faces, disputing the plaudits with the fresher voices and fairer forms; the minister who has preached his last sermon—these all know the hidden bitterness of the saturations to provide the simplest thing "for the last time." It is not alone kissing the last time. "The celebrated author, in this admirable ing even the simplest thing "for the last time." It is not alone kissing the dark that gives us this strange pain. We put away our boyish toys with an odd heartache; we are too old to walk any longer on our stills, too tall to play marbles on our stills, too tall to play marbles on the state of the states.

A writer in the Chicago Times speaks Mr. Withers, who up to that and describing the winter there says :-The chill, tawny red of a winter sunset aceable man, and was not supposed is not so noticable here, nor that blotted or to have a particle of fighting ability bleared aspect of the night sky, which fre-about him, had been warned that the quently makes the winter evenings of the bridegroom was quick-tempered and exceedingly jealous, and that he would do well to ladle out the service pretty do well to ladle out the service pretty considerable mild. To this warning, however, he paid no attention, being determined to do his duty, no matter what the consequences might be.

The service proceeded smoothly until the clergyman reached the point where he asked the bridegroom if he took this woman' to be his wedded wife. To this Mr. Roaring Bill replied by remarking that he was about to marry a lady, and any man who called her a woman' must be remarkably anxious to incur the expense of a personal funeral. Paying no attention to this remark, the clergyman proceeded, and inquired if the bridegroom would promise to love, cherish and protect the bride. This was regarded by Mr. Roaring Bill in the light of an unnecassary saking of eventions for the service protection to the service proceeded. This was regarded by Mr. Roaring Bill in the light of an unnecassary saking of eventions for the service pretty in the tooth matter which generally characterizes the succeeding month. The terror of the winter, if the term may be used, begins in the early part of March, when those dreadful storms of sanow take place which make travel on the plains so dangerous. Occasionally almost an entire winter may pass away without any serious or protracted storm, as, for example, the winter of 1873, which was very mild from the beginning of the year until the spring. But though this is sometimes the case it is unnecessary to conceal the fact that several weeks of winter are very trying, not so much from the cold, which, for reasons already given is easily endured, but from the prevalence of keen and biting winds. The sky is bright, the snow spark less beneath the sun, the sun turns a warm and generous face towards the earth. Viewed from within doors the scene is en-Roaring Bill in the light of an unnec-essary asking of questions. I want you to understand that thiehyer's a square deal, and if you don't just go ahead with your marryin' and drop this askin' of impertinent questions, it'll lead to difficulties. You hear me.' Still the courageous clergyman, heedless of the brewing storm, ignored the bridegroom's interruption, and read the service with cool and steady courage. Presently, he inquired of the bride if she would promise to love, honor and obey her husband. At this point, the

Still the clergyman pursued the even tenor of his way. One might have im agined that he was deaf, so utterly heedless was he of the irregular respectators who had assembled to witness the ceremony were making bets freely as to whether Mr. Bill would kill him at the first fire, or whether he would merely mark him with a bullet for future identification.
