

The first part of the report deals with the general situation in the country. It is noted that the economy is showing signs of recovery, but that inflation remains a serious problem. The government has taken measures to control inflation, but these have had limited success. The report also discusses the state of the public sector, which is still a major burden on the economy.

The second part of the report deals with the specific measures that have been taken to address the inflation problem. These include measures to control government spending, to increase tax revenues, and to improve the efficiency of the public sector.

The third part of the report deals with the recommendations for the future. It is recommended that the government continue to pursue its policies to control inflation, but that it should also take steps to improve the overall economic environment. This includes measures to attract foreign investment, to improve the quality of infrastructure, and to enhance the skills of the workforce.

This report was prepared by the Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLA) in cooperation with the World Bank.
