

diplomacy in all such states for the purpose of recording events as they occur and of reading their true meaning with diligence and exactitude."

If we add to that a vigorous pursuit of general welfare and of permanent peace in the councils of the world, then we have defined the diplomatic skills we must employ in the service of mankind in this century.