is not really interested in the creation of jobs, the generation of wealth and the employment of people. What it is interested in is the intervention of the state so that the state can come into the homes and rooms of our citizens and tell us there is something called government which can run our lives better than we as individual Canadians can. That is where the great pretenders really fall flat because they should know, if they do not, that there is no place in Canada which has a more intensive spirit of enterprise than western Canada. There may be lots of places which are equal, but there are none which are greater. To pretend that somehow members of the NDP want the state to roll all over them is simply a fabrication of the imagination.

It does my heart good to see the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) right in bed with the sheets pulled up tight around him with the CPR with respect to Bill C-18 and Bill C-19. For generations we have cried for that change in the west so we could keep our packing plants, our flour mills, our crushing plants and all of the rest. But the Hon. Member for Skeena asks, why not sell more coal? But his Party says no to the method by which we could sell the coal. It does not want any part of those two Bills which will bring about some freedom of opportunity for western Canada to develop its infrastructure.

Perhaps I can take a look at a few other resolutions, about which the Hon. Member challenged me a few moments ago. He wants me to read some agricultural resolutions.

Mr. Fulton: Point of order.

Mr. Malone: Good. I will allow him his point of order.

Mr. Fulton: I wonder if this political giant from Crowfoot might have something to say about what he and his Government have done for Alberta. Or is he so simple-minded that he cannot possibly tell Albertans one thing he and his Party have done?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There will be time for questions and comments after the Hon. Member's speech. That, I think, is just debate. The Hon. Member for Crowfoot has the floor.

Mr. Malone: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I might add that my neurons are not lonesome as might be the case elsewhere.

The Hon. Member for Skeena does not want me to finish reading his resolutions.

Mr. Fulton: That is because your Government won't do anything for Alberta, Arnie. Let's hear one thing.

Mr. Malone: The Hon. Member wants to hear one thing. I will not give him one thing. If you will allow me the time, Mr. Speaker, I will give him enough things which have been done for Alberta to fill the rest of the day and half way into the night.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Fulton: Let's hear the best thing the Government has done for Alberta.

Mr. Malone: The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) and I were on a little chatter with CBC Calgary. I read out some of the NDP resolutions. What he said is on tape in Calgary. He said I was on a witch-hunt. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, what will the average citizen in Alberta think about a person who was the Leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, who today is an elected Member of Parliament, who has a major part in influencing people about resolutions which are developed, who says, when you read his Party's resolutions as direct quotes in public so that Canadians can know about them, that I am on a witch-hunt? That is what the Hon. Member for Skeena is doing now. He does not like what I am doing. It must hurt.

Mr. Fulton: It is just that you have nothing to say, Arnie, you are a mental midget.

Mr. Malone: Here is what we get if we had an NDP Government: "the establishment of industrial plants to be co-operatively or publicly owned for the processing of food and the manufacture of farm supply items in the regions of production."

Well, now, isn't that interesting. Now they want the Government to own these farm machinery plants and the supply outlets.

And get this: "the establishment of a public commission to determine a formula for farm unit size on a regional basis."

Did you hear any farmer stand up, Mr. Speaker, and applaud that? Let us take a look at another one. That Party espouses "taking into public ownership some existing farm supply retail operations, farm machinery assembly plants, meat-packing plants and canneries".

Well, Canadian farmers, there you go. The NDP can give you all Polaris tractors. Would that not be a real thrill!

The Hon. Member opposite asks what it is I am quoting from. Well, here it is, the NDP Resolutions Reference book, dated October 1986. Here it states:

This book contains those resolutions passed by New Democrats since 1961 which are still current today. That is, resolutions which have not been overtaken by events or superseded by subsequent resolutions.

There they are, Mr. Speaker. I can tell you, when I finish reading this book to Canadians, the New Democratic Party will be at 2 per cent in the polls and no higher, if people are made to understand all of the stuff that is in here.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Malone: There are socialist Governments around the world, many of which are in northern Europe, but there is only one socialist Party in the whole western world that wants to get
