

YALE (ELIHU), the principal benefactor of Yale college, was born at New Haven in 1648, and at the age of ten years went to England, and about the year 1678 to the East Indies, where he acquire' a large estate, was made governor of fort St. George, and married an Indian lady of fortune. After his return to London he was chosen governor of the East India company, and made those donations to the college in his native town, which induced the trustees to bestow on it the name of Yale. He died in Wales July 8, 1721.—Clap's hist. Yale college; 29; Holmes' annals, ii. 104.

YATES (ROBERT), chief justice of New York, died at Albany in September 1801.

ZUBLY (JOHN JOACHIM, D. D.), first minister of the presbyterian church in Savannah, came from St. Gall in Switzerland, and took the charge of this church in 1760. He preached to an English and German congregation, and sometimes also he preached in French. He was a member of the provincial congress in 1775, but as he differed in opinion from his fellow citizens with respect to the independence of the United States, he incurred their displeasure, and his future days were embittered. He died at Savannah in July, 1781. He was a man of great learning, of a vigorous and penetrating mind, and of a heart moulded into the Christian spirit. He published a sermon on the value of that faith, without which it is impossible to please God, 1772; a sermon on the death of the reverend John Osgood of Midway, 1773; the law of liberty, a sermon on American affairs at the opening of the provincial congress of Georgia, with an appendix, giving an account of the struggle of Switzerland to recover liberty, 1775.—Georgia analytical repository, i. 49; Gordon, ii. 75.
