LONDON, FRIDAY, AUG. 2, 1907.

THE JAPANESE INVASION.

There is some agitation in British Columbia over the influx of Japanese from Hawaii, and a difficult problem may be created for the federal authorities. One steamer alone brought 1,200 Japanese to Vancouver two weeks ago.

The Government of Japan has faithfully observed its pledge to restrict emigration to Canada, but it has no control over the movements of the Mikado's subjects in the Hawaiian Islands. Thousands of Japanese coolies are employed in the sugar plantations of the islands owing to the depressed condition of the sugar industry. As admission to the United States is refused, many of the coolies are coming to Canada. There is an outcry from the labor organizations of the Coast Province, and the politicians are, of course, taking advantage of the situation.

The Legislature of British Columbia has more than once passed laws placing Japanese on the same footing as Chinese, but the Federal Government has disallowed such legislation because of the relations between Great Britain and Japan. Japan is the ally of Great Britain and the Japanese have treaty rights within the British Empire, which the Dominion Government cannot override. The disallowance of anti-Japanese legislation by the federal authorities was prompted by imperial interests, and recent treaty arrangements have confirmed Japanese in the right of free entry to this country.

It may be that the people of British Columbia are unnecessarily alarmed, and that the influx of Japanese will not assume large proportions. The Legislature of British Columbia should bear in mind the questions of imperial policy which embarrass the Federal Government, and should not take hasty action. If the Japanese invasion continues on a large scale, however, it may be necessary to plead with the Imperial Government to find us a way out of the difficulty.

PORTUGAL'S CRISIS AND PRETENDER.

As was expected, Portugal's political troubles have developed into a trial of strength between the people and an absolute government. Cable dispatches show that the popular protests against the reactionary course of King Carlos in undertaking to conduct the taxing operations and expending the public funds without legislative authority, have led to grave disorders. The feeling at Lisbon amongst the conservative element is that Britain should interfere, as under treaty she has the right, in order to prevent anarchy or revolution. Britain, however, is more likely to exert her influence to induce King Carlos to change his policy and methods. Meanwhile, the pretender Dom Miguel, of Brazanza, is in Austria watching the course of events and ready to respond to a call from his supporters should one come. Until a few weeks ago Dom Miguel has been content to live in comparative obscurity in Austria, where his ties of kinship with the Hapsburgs have caused him to be treated as a relative of the family. He has been honored with the colony of a crack hussar regiment and the order of the Golden Fleece, just as if he were an Austrian archduke. Born in Austria in 1853 and educated in that country, he has been looked up on till now as an Austrian in all but name and title, and was, moreover, believed to be so thoroughly contented with his lot that something akin to amazement has been created at Vienna by his public announcement that he has never renounced his claim to the throne of Portugal, and that when the hour arrives he will be ready and delighted to take possession thereof. He has blossomed forth as a full-fledged pretender, and since there is a large party in Portugal that is championing his cause and clamoring for his proclamation as King, he is today much in the public eye of Europe.

Dom Miguel has been described as standing for legitimism in Portugal in the same way that his fellow-pretender, Don Carlos, does in Spain. But their positions are entirely different, inasmuch as, on the one hand, in Spain, the order of the succession to the crown was altered by King Ferdinand VII. in favor of his daughter, Isabella, without any regard to the hereditary rights of his brother, the original Don Carlos, while on the other hand the late Dom Miguel, who reigned for a time as King of Portugal before being compelled to abdicate and to leave the country, had secured possession of his throne by a wholly indefensible act of usurpation, by the violation of his most solemn pledges to the members of his family, to his people and to the great powers. Furthermore, while there has never been any question raised as to the birth of the younger brother of King Ferdinand of Spain, there are serious doubts as to the legitimacy of Dom Miguel's father, the regent ex-King Miguel of Portugal. Like Don Carlos, however, the present Dom Miguel has the support of a large body of the clergy and of the great territorial aristocracy, whose old time rights have been greatly curtailed by radical legislation. As a matter of fact, Dom Miguel is only in part of royal blood, for his mother did not belong to any of the reigning houses of Europe, but merely to one of the families of the mediocrity nobility, being a Princess of Lowenstein-Wertheim. Dom Miguel was born some twenty years after his father's exile from Portugal, and all told he has spent but three days in Portugal, where he narrowly escaped arrest. He showed himself a dashing officer of Austrian cavalry in the suppression of the insurrection of Herzegovina and Bosnia, and is credited with being one of the cleverest sporting shots in Europe. As for his claims to the throne of Portugal they are described as being based on usurpation, and have been denied by no less an authority than the great Prince Metternich, the most vigorous champion of legitimism in the last century. Meantime, Portugal, from north to south, is on the verge of civil war, and what the final outcome of the crisis will be it is impossible to say.

AN ANTI-MARRIAGE CANDIDATE.

The election of an out-and-out Socialist for the Yorkshire riding of Colne Valley, defeating both a Liberal and a Conservative candidate, has added another element of interest to British politics. Such an event would have been considered impossible in any English constituency a few years ago. The new member, Mr. Grayson, goes so far as to advocate the abolition of the marriage tie. This is the teaching of many of the recognized leaders of socialism, and is a logical outgrowth of their economic ideas. The family relationship is the greatest stimulus to the acquisition of property. The average man who marries and raises a family is impelled to found a home or estate, or otherwise provide for the maintenance of wife and children. The dissolution of the family tie, by removing the chief incentive to accumulation, would pave the way for the abolition of private property, which is the basis of socialism. The denunciation of the legal contract of marriage is not a tenet insisted upon by Marx and his school, though the tendency among continental Socialists is in that direction.

In Finland the majority of the women elected to Parliament are Socialists, who make the abolition of the marriage bond a cardinal feature of their programme. The election of a parliamentary candidate holding these ideas is more to be wondered at in England, where home and family are supposed to be sacred words. The teaching, however, is not very far removed from that of trial marriages, which has the sanction of some well-known names on both sides of the Atlantic. In the United States the bonds of matrimony are so easily severed that Socialists of the Grayson type have little to complain of.

The Filipinos have had an election. Their troubles are only beginning.

Joe Martin has bobbed up again in Vancouver, this time as an anti-Japanese candidate. He is the most persistent freak in Canadian politics.

The Orient is full of surprises, one of them being that the Koreans should show any resentment at being swallowed by Japan. The worm is turning too late.

In Belfast the police are on strike and troops have been sent to keep them in order. There is something of a Hibernian in the situation, and it contains the germ of a comic opera.

Morocco, like Turkey, is a pest to civilization, because the civilized powers are jealous of one another. A little rough surgery is necessary to effect a cure in both cases, but the powers are quarrelling as to who shall perform the operation.

So conservative a body as the British Medical Association advises that the state pay for the care of the sick. With public feeding of school children, public provision for old age, and public care of the sick, Great Britain would be meeting the Socialists halfway.

CANADA'S G. O. M.

(Montreal Witness.)

Canada's grand old man, Donald Alexander Smith, Lord Strathcona, who is now on his way to Canada, came more, and for the second time this year, has reached his 87th birthday. He is still in harness as Canada's high commissioner in England, a position which he has now held for eleven years, and as chairman of the London Bay Company, keeping active control over his own vast private interests and benefices. May he long be able to continue to serve his country, as he has done for a time as King of Portugal before being compelled to abdicate and to leave the country, had secured possession of his throne by a wholly indefensible act of usurpation, by the violation of his most solemn pledges to the members of his family, to his people and to the great powers. Furthermore, while there has never been any question raised as to the birth of the younger brother of King Ferdinand of Spain, there are serious doubts as to the legitimacy of Dom Miguel's father, the regent ex-King Miguel of Portugal. Like Don Carlos, however, the present Dom Miguel has the support of a large body of the clergy and of the great territorial aristocracy, whose old time rights have been greatly curtailed by radical legislation. As a matter of fact, Dom Miguel is only in part of royal blood, for his mother did not belong to any of the reigning houses of Europe, but merely to one of the families of the mediocrity nobility, being a Princess of Lowenstein-Wertheim. HIS RETENTIVE MEMORY.

(Philadelphia Press.)

"You may not remember me, Miss Sumner," he said, "but I was engaged to you once."

"Indeed?" the Summer Girl replied, coldly. "You have quite a memory for faces."

"No," he replied, glancing at her fair hand; "but I have for the rings I buy."

PUZZLING.

(Chicago News.)

Fond Mamma—Well, professor, how is my daughter getting on with her formula?

Professor—Why, don't you notice her improvement?

Fond Mamma—Well, we can't see where she was improving or where we were getting more used to it.

A WHISTLER STORY.

(Everybody's Magazine.)

The late James McNeil Whistler was standing bareheaded in a hat shop, the clerk having taken his hat to another part of the shop for comparison. A man rushed in with his hat in his hand, and, supposing Whistler to be a clerk, angrily confronted him.

"See here!" he said, "this hat doesn't fit."

Whistler eyed the stranger critically from head to foot, and then drew out a well-nigh invisible pocket watch.

"Well, neither does this one," he said. "I'll be hanged if I care much for the color of your trousers."

MALE CHIVALRY.

(London Regiment.)

The custom of a man offering his left arm to a woman came from the time when all were fighting men, and meant that he must have his sword arm free to defend her from molestation.

POINT TO REMEMBER.

(Gentleman.)

Many women too often forget that there is such a thing as a dowry mind, as well as a dowry frock.

TWO ESSENTIALS OF LIFE.

(Baltimore American.)

"My son wants to marry my daughter. Does she know how to cook a good dinner?"

"Yes, if she gets the materials for one. Does your son know how to supply them?"

AS PRONOUNCED AT HOME.

(The Tailor.)

That names of places in England frequently are not pronounced as spelled is proved by the experience of two cyclists who were going from Clacton to the old village of St. Oyston. "Are we right, Mr. Oyston?" the cyclist asked of a laborer. "A blank look met the question; he had never heard of such place." A second wayfarer, interrogated, was equally ignorant. Then came a third, a scratched head, a puzzled look, and then the dawn of intelligence. "Aye, to be sure, I have it now. It's Shosney, you mean!"

PRIESTS AND ORANGEMEN FRATERNIZE.

(Orange Sentinel.)

At two points in Ont.: Roman Catholic priests fraternize with the Orangemen on the twelfth of July. Rev. Father Doherty, of Arthur, spent a portion of the day at the picnic grounds at that place, and the parish priest at Ingersoll visited the quarters of the Orange men at the camp of the regalia. It was Father Doherty who was the recipient of a gold-headed cane from the Protestants of Arthur a short time ago. This mark of esteem is proof of the revived father's devotion to his spiritual duties.

LET US HAVE PEACE.

(S. E. Kiser.)

Come, let us sing a song of peace:
Why all the hatred and the rancor?
Let those who shout for vengeance cease,
And let the warships sway at anchor.

Why stain the gently-flowing rills
The foam against the rocks of battle?
Why range our legions on the hills
Now torn about by grating cattle?

Ah, let the cannon's mouth remain
A nest where feathered songsters twitter!
Why desolate the peaceful plain?
What joy is in the sabre's glitter?

There may be hills that ought to cease,
There may be wrongs in need of righting.
But for the present let's have peace—
It's much too hot to think of fighting.

CONTINGENT.

(Chicago Tribune.)

Southern Girl—Oh, does it act make you happy, as Rakin says, to watch the corn grow?

Young Farmer—Well, that depends on whether you're watching it grow on your side or the other side of the line fence.

LONG TIME TO WAIT.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Prospects are very bright for Conservative success in Quebec—about 100 years after the date upon which Sir Wilfrid Laurier departs this life.

TANTED.

(Philadelphia Inquirer.)

Mad—Did she marry him for pure love?

Chloe—No; it was adulterated with money.

A MONEY MAKER.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

The fullard estate has yielded to the Ontario Government $355,000 in succession dues. It is apparent that among other things carable by Pink Pills is empty money chests.

BY THE RESOUNDING SEA.

(New York Sun.)

Jack—What a beautiful scene.

Stella—Yes, indeed; I just love to watch the marcelled ocean.

ALL DEPENDS ON THE DOGS.

(Washington Star.)

As Goddard, of the American Automobile Association, was recounting in Worcester some of his touring adventures.

"One summer morning," he said, "the approach of a great flock of sheep obliged me to pull off the narrow country road. I halted my car and watched with interest the passage of the sheep, the intelligent dogs and the shepherd."

"I had a short talk with the shepherd about his old and difficult trade."

"Look here," I said, "what do you do, driving sheep like this on a narrow road, when you meet another flock coming in the opposite direction?"

"Well," said the shepherd, "we just drive straight on, both of us, and the one that has the best dogs gets the most sheep."

PICNICKED AT SPRINGBANK

Nissourians Spent a Very Pleasant Time at the River Park.

About 200 ex-Nissourians of the city of London met at Springbank Wednesday and spent an enjoyable time with each other.

It was decided to make this an annual affair. An executive committee was appointed, as follows: Chairman, Mr. J. G. McNece; Secretary, Mr. H. E. Straith; Dr. McWilliam, Robert Dean, Henry Scott and J. B. Conley.

At about 6:30 a sumptuous repast was served in the pavilion, and after that a programme was rendered, consisting of speeches, songs recitations, etc., the following taking part: Mrs. Jamieson and McNamara, Misses Rosa McNece and Irene Straith, Messrs. J. G. McNece, Dr. McWilliam, J. B. Conley and D. Urquhart.

It is the intention of the committee to invite East and West Nissouri and Zorra to the next annual picnic, when games will be indulged in. Everyone in attendance wore a yellow badge.

LIPTON WILL TRY AGAIN

Representative En Route to Arrange an American Cup Series.

New York, Aug. 2.—A dispatch to the World from Gourock, Scotland, says: "The Hon. Charles Russell, son of the late Lord Russell, of Kilowen, and a prominent British yachtsman, is on his way to America to open negotiations with the New York Yacht Club on behalf of Sir Thomas Lipton, with a view to the latter's challenging for an American cup race next year. A statement was published here yesterday that Sir Thomas had abandoned his idea of challenging again, but it was proven to be unauthorized. From a reliable source it was learned that he is as willing as ever to try once more to endeavor to lift the cup, and every indication points to his trying to do so next year if the New York Yacht Club will accept a challenge under the present American measurement rule. In all probability a challenge will be sent on the line within the next two months, putting a question with new life upon the New York Club. The Hon. Charles Russell will consult with the holders of the cup to that end."

COLLECTING THE CARS

Private Owners Organize to Insure Prompt Returns.

Cleveland, Aug. 2.—Fifty representatives of companies owning and operating private car lines, met here yesterday, and organized the Individual Car Owners' Association. Those present are from the territory east of the Mississippi River, and represent about 125,000 cars. The association will endeavor to take in all of the private car owners in the United States and Canada. The purpose of the organization is to obtain prompt return of cars after reaching their destination, and to collect from the railways any damages that may accrue as a result of any unnecessary delay similar to the policy pursued between railway companies. The next meeting will be held in Chicago in September.
