Mr Churchill has made two or three o the best contributions to recent American fiction, and now we are to have a new play founded on his latest work "Mr. Crewe's Career," which is billed for next week at the Royal Alexandra. The book is about a youth, Hercules, of At a meeting of ward four Conservatives.

There has been little change in the company since Messrs. Shubert placed it upon the stage of the Lyric Theatre in New York, where it enjoyed the unprecedented run of nearly a year. The characters of the two acts of to-day are carried back along the "Road to Yesterday" by a midsummer night's wish and find themselves in their previous and find themselves in their previous incarnation on earth. This will be the first time "The Road to Yesterday" has been presented in this city at les than dollar-fifty prices.

Next week's attraction at the Ma-jestic Theatre will be "Thru Death Valley," a play which contains at least one sensation that has never before been approached in the annals of melodrama. A man is tied at the stake, while close at hand a venomous rattlessake is beautiful.
