"After taking the mountain tops of San Michele and Sabotino, he attacked Gorizia not only from the front across the Isonzo, but also from the sides and rear. When the Duke of Aosta, commander of the Third Army, who was present during the three days of fighting, entered the city after forcing the bridge across the river, at the head of cavalry and cycle corps. Gorizia was found to be deserted save by great numbers of wounded and dying Austrians on the outskirts. The duke was accompanied by his cousin, the king. The only damage done by the Austrians was that occasioned by their attempts to destroy military buildings filled with large quantities of supplies.

The fighting at the bridge across the Isonzo at Porgora leading into Gorisia. Was among the most sanguinary episodes of the war. Refore this encounter the bridge had been named Death Pass, After the Italian guns had obtained sommand of Gorisia from the heights of Sabotino, San Michele, Monte Fortin, Monte Santo and Basso Fortin, Italian infantry advanced toward the bridge. After the wildest fighting, in which 100 Austrians were drowned, the bridge was taken. Entrance to the city then was comparatively easy.
