

IS JAILED FOR KISSING LADY

Austrian Music Critic Gets Severe Treatment For Trivial Offence

Arrested on Board Ship and Held Several Days in Italian Jail

VIENNA, Nov. 6.—"Don't kiss!" might become the slogan for travelers in Italy, if the experiences of Dr. Erwin Felber, a leading Vienna musical critic, are to be taken as typical. Dr. Felber, whose adventures will probably form the subject of diplomatic intervention on the part of the Austrian Government, states:

"On September 11 I accompanied a woman friend, a noted Berlin singer, in the steamer from Venice to Fiume. We were the only passengers on the first-class deck, which was in total darkness.

"We flirted innocently, and as I kissed my friend the searchlight was turned full on us. The captain of the boat admonished us with much profane language from the bridge, and on landing in Venice I was handed over to the police.

POCKETS EMPTIED.

"Two carabinieri took hold of me, emptied my pockets and threw me into a dark cell, where I spent a sleepless night, sharing my plank bed with a drunken man. On the following morning I was led handcuffed through the streets to the police court. On the way we met Professor Adolf Weissmann, the Berlin musical critic, who protested against my treatment and threatened to complain to Signor Mussolini.

"The only result was that I was taken back to the cell and left there for nearly 24 hours without food or even water. Then I was handcuffed again and dragged to the Giudecca prison, where my fingerprints were taken, and I was thrown into a room where were 15 or 20 dangerous criminals.

"At last my case was tried. I was handcuffed again, and on my protesting the handcuffs were screwed on so tightly that my skin was broken. In addition I was chained by the leg to three criminals and thus led before the court.

"There was no lawyer to defend me and no interpreter; and the captain of the steamer was the only witness. The magistrate and the public prosecutor shook with laughter during the proceedings.

"Judgment was delivered, and I was told that I had been pardoned and that in an hour's time I would be a free man. Nevertheless, still chained, I was led back to my cell and kept there for five more days. At the end of this period the intervention of the Austrian Legation and a Venice lawyer secured my liberty."

Girl, 3, Braves Fire For Doll; Boy, 4, Returns To Save Both

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Frank Campagna 24, four years old, started downstairs with his mother, his brother and his sister when fire was discovered in the three-story house in Brooklyn, where they lived on the top floor. The flames had started in the cellar, and by the time Frank's grandfather called to them the whole house was filled with smoke.

Frank was in the rear of the procession, and when he got to the second floor he heard a little girl crying. He could not see because of the smoke, but he recognized the voice as that of Elizabeth Grid, three years old, who lived with the mother on the second floor. Frank immediately turned aside and went into the Grid apartment. There he found Elizabeth sitting on the floor, crying and coughing from the smoke, and clutching a ragged little doll.

Later it was discovered that Elizabeth had got almost down stairs when she realized she had forgotten her doll. So she went back for it and the smoke was so thick that her mother did not know she had gone. Frank told her to stop crying, and then he tucked the doll under his arm and caught Elizabeth by the hand. They made their way into the hall, but the smoke was swirling up in billows, and the children were afraid to venture into it.

So Frank suggested that they go up stairs. He half carried, half led the little girl to the top floor, and they went into the Campagna apartment. Meanwhile Mrs. Campagna and Mrs. Grid had noticed the absence of their children, and a stranger who did not tell his name rushed into the house. He made his way to the Campagna apartment and there he found Frank and Elizabeth lying on the floor near a window, almost overcome by the smoke. He carried them down stairs, where an ambulance surgeon revived them.

GIRL GUIDE NOTES

The Girl Guide fall and winter activities are in full swing. The Saint John District Association held its annual meeting this week and the report of Miss Dorothy Purdy, district commissioner, contained an encouraging record of the year's events. The report was in part as follows:

"Thanks chiefly to our good friend, Mr. Lister, of the Boy Scout Association, we have formed some new companies—8th, 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th Saint John. Of these, two have been disbanded owing to lack of officers. The older companies are doing well, the number of Guides being about 280. The 1st and 2nd Saint John, Browne Packs have disbanded for the same reason, but the 2nd is starting again and a 3rd has been formed.

"On Dec. 6, 1924, the general assembly for Canada spent part of the day in Saint John but, unfortunately, was unable to meet any of the association except your commissioner.

TRAINING WEEK.

"A very successful training week was held in January under the direction of Miss MacGregor, of Toronto. An excellent feature of the week was a class for patrol leaders.

"A party sale was held before the training week at which a sufficient sum was realized to cover our expenses. "Dinner from several of the companies entered the St. John Ambulance Association's junior first aid competition but were not lucky enough to win, although I believe they made a very good showing.

"From the end of March until the beginning of July Mrs. Gibbon acted as district commissioner, during which time the district church parade was held.

SUCCESSFUL CAMPS.

"In spite of the rather poor weather, enjoyable and successful camps were held by some of the companies. Miss Barber took the 5th to Beasley's Point and at the same time, kept a Campers' License's eye on the last Rothersey camp. The 7th Saint John and the 2nd Rothersey each had

PRINCE FOOTS PART OF BILLS FOR TOURS

Government Grant Falls $350,000 Short of Costs of 1919

LONDON, Nov. 7.—How the Prince of Wales keeps physically fit is described in a recent article in the London Sunday Chronicle which says: "The Prince sets an ideal of physical fitness which is at once a challenge and an example to the young men of the post-war generation. No matter how late he has been up the previous night he never rises later than seven or eight; 6.30 is his usual hour. His exercise is regular and unrelenting, an hour or more each morning. Squash, racquets, polo, gymnastics, running, walking, riding—these keep him, at 31, in the first flush of glowing youth."

He has never yielded to the pleasures of the table. Indeed, no elegant, apologetically to keep her slim and supple figure, eats more frugally.

Although he derives a considerable income from the Duchy of Cornwall and a valuable slice of London, and from the wise investments made by his trustees, Sir Lionel Halsey and Lord Revelstoke—who are guided by the advice of the directors of Bank. He spends more money on other than on himself. He does not keep a racing stable, a yacht, or a country house. His small town establishment is not expensive; his hunting quarters are excessively modest.

"His greatest single expense item is the cost of the Imperial tours. The grant voted by Parliament by no means covers the cost incurred, and the Prince's accounts prior to this tour showed that he was $850,000 out of pocket by his official tours since 1919. His last nine months' tours will no doubt bring that over the $500,000 mark."

BABY'S INHERITANCE STARTS LONG FLIGHT

Question of Maternity of Youngster is Raised in Belgian Courts

LONDON, Nov. 7.—Ever since the armistice the problem of a baby's inheritance has been engaging the attention of the Belgian courts.

In December, 1918, the wife of a Belgian soldier arrived at Brussels with a five-months-old baby, which she said had been born to her in a London hospital. Her husband was killed in the trenches, and she claimed a share in the estate of the Belgian father on behalf of the child.

The family demanded an inquiry—the grandfather had died of grief on the death of his son—and the young widow's papers were found to be all in order. The court consequently ordered the family to pay the amount claimed. Further inquiries followed, a commission was sent to London, and it was learned that no child was born to the widow in the hospital, but that her friend had had a baby in the institution. It was stated that the widow had adopted her friend's child. The family thereupon demanded that the widow should submit to a medical examination, but this she refused. Soon afterwards she died.

Further demands for an examination of the body were made, but the proceedings dragged on, and eventually the doctors declared that no definite decision could be reached. The court's decision was upheld, but an appeal followed, and a final decision has yet to be given.

Meanwhile the protracted legal proceedings threatened to absorb practically the whole of the disputed estate, and whatever happens little or nothing will be left for the baby.
