TOMMY'S JACK-KNIFE VERY USEFUL THING

Blade, Can-opener and "Marlin-spike"—Germans Puzzled Over the Latter

Behind British Lines in France, May 18.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).—Every soldier in the British army in France is provided with the government, as part of his overseas kit, with a jack-knife. The military jack-knife is built for service. It has only three parts—a big blade of Sheffield steel, a can-opener, and a "marlin-spike." The whole thing clasps into a solid steel or bone handle four inches long, which is provided with a ring so that it can be hung to the belt. The can-opener is an indispensable part of the provision for a soldier's well-being at the front. Several important items of his daily menu are supplied to him in sealed cans.

The Sheffield blade has numerous uses too obvious to need mention, but it is noticeable that Tommy Atkins frequently uses it for purposes of eating in preference to the table knife in his kit.

The knife-blade is also used constantly as a wood-cutter. In the trenches the lighting of a bonfire is frequently a great operation owing to the vital necessity of avoiding smoke. The Germans have a strong antipathy to smoke, and the sight of a rising from the British trenches arouses in them disturbing evidences of envy, hatred, malice and uncharitableness. It is well, therefore, to avoid smoke. So the wood for the bonfire must be split up into thin sticks and shavings, and for this purpose the official jack-knife is the ideal instrument.

When the soldier is withdrawn from the trenches it is his first duty to make himself and his belongings clean and presentable for inspection. Tommy hanks his coat on a peg and "shaves" it with the knife blade.

The marlin-spike attachment is useful for prying open wooden boxes, for cleaning stones and mud out of a horse's hoofs, for adjusting belts and harness. Bradders for the trenches are made from blued tin punched full of holes to admit a draught.

The Germans were, for a long time, greatly puzzled by the marlin-spike attachment which they found on every British prisoner's jack-knife. They made great capital out of a story that it was used to gouge out of the eyes of German wounded. In the official report of the British Prisoners of War Commission, several instances of this fable are recorded.

Captain Beaman testified before the commission that he was berated by a German colonel for permitting his men to use their marlin-spike on the eyes of German wounded. Captain Browne told the commission of listening to a Uhlán major who was giving a lecture and who exhibited a British jack-knife, showing the marlin-spike attachment and describing it as used for torturing German prisoners. The story appears to have been deliberately cooked up by the German military authorities for the consumption of their troops.

MORNING NEWS OVER THE WIRES

Leading American coal mining men, accompanied by C. A. Magrath, the Dominion fuel controller, are spending several days in Cape Breton with a view to lending their assistance of their expert knowledge in meeting the country's fuel problem. American capital may be invested.

The Ross rifle factory at Quebec will be reopened under government operation and it is understood that an order has been received for 2,000,000 pistols for the United States government.

Jewelers are not allowed to raise their prices without permission of the minister of trade and commerce, to be granted upon the recommendation of the war trade board, according to a new order-in-council.

The Cote woman, known as "Venus" Cote, is not serving two years in Port-au-Prince penitentiary for wearing male attire as first reported. She was sent up for five years for theft in addition to breaking from jail.

Captain George N. Bailey, M. D., who was sentenced by Colonel Denison last March to serve three months' imprisonment for reflecting on the sobriety of Canadian soldiers, will not have to go to jail. After considering the case the justice department decided that Captain Bailey can serve the term "under license."

Colvin J. Hudson, New York state director of food production, predicts a bumper crop.

ZEEBRUGGE HARBOR FILLING

Photographs Show Sinking Process—German Dredger Sunk

London, June 12.—The plight of the Germans at the Belgian submarine base of Zeebrugge, in consequence of the measures taken by the British navy to blockade the port, is even more serious than had been believed heretofore. Photographs just taken from airplanes show that the entrance to the harbor is rapidly silting up, and that accordingly the British effort to close the channel is being reinforced by nature.

The sunken vessel inside the break-water which was at first believed to be an enemy destroyer, now appears to be a larger dredger. The loss of this ship evidently has crippled the Germans in their attempts to clear the channel.
