Woodman, general superintendent of the New Brunswick division, who just completed an inspection of his lines on the Brunswick division.

In conversation with a representative of The Times Mr. Larmour said that the outlook for general freight and passenger movement through the port of St. John this season is bright. He came here in connection with business interests in his department. Mr. Walton, who was recently appointed general passenger agent of the eastern lines, is visiting St. John for the first time. ## A. POYAS HAS GOTH DEALER TAKEN TO COURT

Gives Evidence That He was Assaulted in Store
When He Declined to Make Purchase.

There was a little flutter this morning in the vicinity of King square about 10:45 which resulted in the arrest of Thomas Murphy, a cloth dealer from Ireland, on a charge of assaulting A. Poyas in his store in King square.

According to the story told in court this morning Murphy had been in the store of Mr. Poyas yesterday exhibiting some of his goods and trying to make a sale. Mr. Poyas had taken the matter under consideration and the young man returned this morning. Mr. Poyas told him that he had decided not to take the cloth, whereupon, it is alleged, the young man became abusive. Mr. Poyas ordered him out of his store and the young man went as far as the door. At this point it is alleged, he swung around and struck Mr. Poyas under the ear, told him he had a good mind to smash his windows, and walked away.

Mr. Poyas went to the head of King street and told Traffic Policeman Duffy of the occurrence, and Policeman Duffy set in pursuit. He overhauled his quarry in the old burial ground. In court Mr. Poyas gave evidence against him as related. The accused was remanded to jail.

ROBBER OF WOMEN GETS 5 TO 10 YEARS

Alfred E. Lindsay Swindled
Dupes Out of More Than $500,000—Turned State's Evidence.

New York, Dec. 2.—Alfred E. Lindsay, former broker of South Nyack, who pleaded guilty to grand larceny, after having been charged with swindling wealthy women out of more than $500,000, was sentenced to five to ten years in prison by Judge Francis X. Mancuso, in General Sessions. Lindsay, who had aided the State in prosecuting two of his alleged accomplices, Major Redondo Sutton and Dr. Knute A. Emlin, was stunned at his sentence.

"You made women of means your prey," said Judge Mancuso to Lindsay. "You turned their heads by lavishly entertaining them with their own money. Your crime is no less an offense than highway robbery or larceny. It is true your victims were persons of wealth, but you left them impoverished. You stole $525,000 from Mrs. Lillian B. Duke and my investigation shows that none of the money you got from these women was invested."

"Acts of this kind, if tolerated, would soon prevent people from investing at all and would injure the mercantile business of our city. It must be stopped. A man of your ability and shrewdness would have prospered in a legitimate business, but you were too lazy. You wanted to live by stealing and you are now here to reap the fruits of your crime."

Lindsay had pleaded guilty to stealing $28,860 on Dec. 8, 1921, from Mrs. E. Arnold of 182 West Seventy-ninth street, but there were eight other indictments against him. Henry Goldstein, attorney for the prisoner, pleaded for clemency, promising that Lindsay would make good the losses incurred through him. Assistant District Attorney Richard C. Murphy said that Lindsay had given valuable aid to the state, but he pointed out that he had been permitted to plead to one of the nine indictments against him. Judge Mancuso said that that was clemency enough.

Lindsay was the dupe of Lindsay, practically widows and divorcees, obtained introductions to widows at the funeral of their husbands. After an acquaintance was thus started, the broker told of an exclusive club where he said he was accustomed to meet the money that he had given him would be lost.

When he had obtained the initial amount for "investment," it was easy to get on the plea that additional funds were required to protect the original principal. Several times women threatened to expose him to the authorities, but each time Lindsay would show that once he was in jail all the money they had given him would be lost.

Mrs. Arnold and Miss Margaret Bogard of 344 West Fifty-seventh street, from whom the broker got $15,000, were in court when he was sentenced and described to Judge Mancuso some of Lindsay's methods.

GOOD THINGS COMING TO THE THEATRES OF ST. JOHN

IMPERIAL'S EXTRA
IN MONDAY SHOW

"The Four Seasons," which is to be shown at the Imperial Monday as an extra feature — in conjunction with Mary Roberts Rinehart's "A Glorious Fool"—is a masterpiece of the kind. It was made under the supervision of Charles Urban, president of the Kineto Company of America, and Dr. Raymond L. Dittmar, curator of the New York Zoological Society. It is a picture that delights, instructs and thoroughly entertains every person of every age, from youngster to oldster. It competes neither with drama or comedy, and yet it is a picture that is composed of elements of both, because nature in motion stirs the deepest pools in the human soul. A bigger instructive attraction than "The Four Seasons" has never been offered. At its premiere in the Rialto theatre in New York it played to crowded houses at every performance and critics on every New York newspaper voted it the most exhilarating production of the year.

Pal's Tale Frees Cowboy With Gun

Trails Chum from Seattle and Finds Him a Prisoner in Court in New York —
Fought in Same Regiment

New York, Dec. 2.—A modern version of the story of Damon and Pythias was told in the Court of Special Sessions during the trial of James O'Bryan, cowboy, charged with illegal possession of a pistol.

O'Bryan, whose home is in London, Ontario, came to New York a week ago to take ship for South America. He stayed at the Seamen's Mission at 25 South street. On last Thursday, he started out to see the town. Before he went, he asked the clerk at the mission to take care of his "artillery," a big forty-five calibre gun. No sooner was O'Bryan out of the building than the clerk called the Old Slip Police Station, and when the cowboy returned, he was arrested by Detective Pierce Fleming.

Before sentencing O'Bryan, Justices Daniel F. Murphy, James P. McInerney and Arthur C. Salmon asked the defendant if he had any friends in New York. O'Bryan started to shake his head, when a commotion was heard in the back of the court room.

Straight up the aisle to the judge's bench strode the tall, slender figure of another cowboy. He wore a silk shirt with a green hankerchief around the neck. His trousers were tucked into high cowhide boots, on the heels of which rattled a pair of spurs. He carried a wide, tall-peaked sombrero in his left hand. Every one was so busy watching the stranger that few of them heard O'Bryan's surprised and joyful cry, "Les!"

The newcomer told the Justices that he was Lester Brooks and that he had been a "side-kick" of O'Bryan's for more than ten years.

"We used to work together on the Bar X Ranch in Montana," said Brooks. "At that time Jim and I were breaking broncs for the tourists to ride in the Glacier National Park. We made two trips to Alaska together, Jim and I have. In the war we were in the same company, a Canadian regiment. A little while ago we got separated in a battle, and while I was trying to find Jim some one told me my pal had gone to New York and was about to start for Argentina."

"Of course, as soon as I heard that, I left for New York myself. Here, I just learned that Jim had been arrested. I wish you'd let him go, Judge, so we can sail tomorrow for South America."

Impressed by Brooks' sincere manner, the Justices, after O'Bryan had pleaded guilty, suspended sentence. The cowboys left the court room together.

The eruption of the volcano Stromboli, which began on Wednesday, ceased yesterday.
