BY TELEGRAPH VIA QUEBEC. TO JOURNAL READING ROOM.

QUEBEC, April 18, 1861.

It is reported from New York that nothing. of importance had occurred at Fort Pickins. Every precaution takes at Washington to guard against any sudden raid on the City. A despate from Montgomery says Rebel Cabinet intend to call 15,000 additional men into field. The New York Expanses asserts that it has reliable information that in Fort Moultrie here were 49 killed, 13 wounded by Anderson's fire.

The War has begun to day. Fort Sumter was attacked by seven butteries on shore. The bombardment on both sides continued the whole day. Fort Sumter replying at long intervals. Major Anderson ceased firing to night, to rest his men; will continue in the morning. Three steamers are lying off, but it is utterly impossible for them to reinforce, or relieve Fort Sumter. A gale is raging.

The fight began by the Secessionists firing upon the steam cutter "Harriet Lane," which was attempting to enter Charleston Harbor; this fire was returned by Fort Sumter.

The firing open Fort Sumter was continued all night at intervals of 20 minutes.

Major Anderson re-opened his fire at 6 this morning.

The breach in Fort Sumter is opposite the Cumming's Point battery, where two port-holes are knocked into one—the wall, from the top, is crumbling. Three large vessels and one steamer approaching.

Charleston, 4 p. m., Saturday.

Sumter surrendered; and the Flng of the Southern Confederacy floats over it, or its remains. orn Confederacy floats over it, or its remains.

Maj Anderson was compelled to surrender, having no aid from the ships, and the Fert on fire requiring all hands to extinguish it. Rafts were formed to pass the troops over to the land; these became targets for the batteries on shore, and great havoc was made among Anderson's men.
